Police and bodyguards attempt to move Prime Minister Gough Whitlam (left of center in white suit) through a hostile crowd at a state political rally Monday in Perth, Australia. Whitlam was booed and pelted with soft drink cans and tomatoes. The trouble came from a large group of farmers unhappy about the government's ending of a fertilizer subsidy.

Subpoena response delay is approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the request of the White House, special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski today gave President Nixon four more days to respond to a subpoena demanding additional Watergate evidence.

The subpoena, issued March 15, called for a response today.

But, over the weekend James D. St. Clair, President Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, asked Jaworski for more time and the prosecutor extended the return date to Friday.

In a brief statement, Jaworski's office said, "In agreeing to the White House request, Mr. Jaworski emphasized the grand jury's need for the material covered under this subpoena."

The prosecutor's office refused to give details about the material subpoenaed.

At the White House, Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the delay in responding to the subpoena was requested so St. Clair "can evaluate and make a judgment in terms of a response."

Asked whether Nixon had seen the subpoena, Ziegler referred to St. Clair and said "I don't know if they've had a chance to discuss it yet."

Ziegler again refused to say what material the special prosecutor was seeking.

And, in a related matter, lawyers for two former White House aides said they will not go to the Supreme Court to try to block transmission of the secret grand jury report on President Nixon's Watergate role to the House impeachment inquiry.

"We've just decided that we've stated our objections and our warnings as forcefully as we can and the government has decided to take the risk," said John Bray, who represents Gordon C. Strachan.

John J. Wilson, lawyer for former presidential chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, declined to comment on the decision not to appeal.

An appeals court had given them until 5 p.m. today to carry the matter to the Supreme Court when it acted Thursday upholding the decision to give the report to the House inquiry.

Haldeman and Strachan were among seven persons indicted March 1 in connection with the Watergate cover-up. President Nixon had not opposed delivery of the report to the House committee.

Deputy presidential Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren refused last week to say whether the President planned to comply with the prosecutor's subpoena. He said it was being handled routinely by White House lawyers.

A spokesman for Jaworski said the subpoena did not involve the Watergate cover-up or White House plumbers cases, in which indictments recently were returned.

That means the material sought probably relates to investigations of the ITT antitrust settlement, dairy industry political contributions or the 18.5-minute erasure found on one subpoenaed tape.

If the President refuses to comply with the subpoena, Jaworski could go to court to ask for an order directing the President to turn over the subpoenaed material.

The White House, meanwhile, has denied a published report that it would give to the House impeachment inquiry tapes of 42 presidential conversations the committee has been trying to obtain. The report appeared in the Los Angeles Times, but Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said no decision had been made to provide additional tapes to the committee.

In other Watergate-related developments:

—A report obtained from court records indicated the nation's largest dairy cooperative gave financial support to Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., in his 1972 presidential bid. The report showed the funds came from Associated Milk Producers Inc. Mills said he was unaware that corporate funds were used, which is illegal.

—A source close to the investigation said congressional investigators doubt that a key document which could solve President Nixon's single biggest tax problem "ever existed." The source said the White House has been unable to find the original deed giving the national archives a collection of Nixon's papers valued at $576,000. Nixon has claimed tax deductions for much of the amount. Frank DeMarco, a Nixon tax lawyer, said the original deed was destroyed.

Kissinger hoping to set stage for new nuclear weapons treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger cautioned Soviet leaders today that there can be no world peace "if we attempt to blackmail each other."

He made the remark after opening talks in the Kremlin with Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev on prospects for a new treaty limiting nuclear arms and fostering peace in the Middle East.

At the same time, Kissinger pledged that President Nixon and his administration remain committed to detente. "Our greatest goal is that over the next three years we can make the relationship that has grown up between our two peoples and our leaders irreversible," Kissinger said.

In a luncheon toast, Kissinger said "We want to make the next summit as significant as the two preceding ones between Nixon and Brezhnev. But he said, 'If our two nations attempt to take advantage of each other, if we attempt to blackmail each other, or deal with each other from a strong position, then there can be no peace among ourselves or in the world.'"

As the talks opened Brezhnev said he was optimistic about another Soviet-American arms agreement.

Kissinger hoped during his three days of talks in the Kremlin to set the stage of a new nuclear weapons treaty President Nixon could sign on a visit to Moscow next summer.

Asked by newsmen if he expected to reach another arms agreement with Nixon then, Brezhnev replied: "I take an optimistic view of that. We have made a very good beginning on that process."

He said relations between the two superpowers "are good" but "there is much work to do at this time."

Asked to characterize the situation with regard to East-West detente, he said the European security conference in Geneva is

"dragging its feet a little" because "the opponents of detente are introducing petty matters that have no bearing on detente."

Although he was speaking of the Geneva conference, it was assumed that he was referring to the Soviet government's problems with the U. S. Congress over trade and Jewish emigration as well as to the Western demand at the security conference for freer flow of peoples and ideas.

The principal question the American secretary of state and the Soviet Communist party chief faced was how to work out a deal limiting development of missiles carrying multiple warheads (MIRV).

Arab leaders begin review of peace plan

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Arab foreign ministers begin meetings in Tunis today to review efforts by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to stop the Arab-Israeli shooting on the Golan Heights.

Tunisian Foreign Minister Habib Chatti, chairman of the Arab League meeting, said the ministers would also discuss a wide range of economic issues. They will discuss the conference between the Arab states and the European Common Market planned for the end of the year, and the special United Nations Assembly on raw material problems opening in New York April 8.

Several Arab governments, notably Libya and Iraq, were expected to be represented by their ambassadors to Tunisia instead of their foreign ministers, demonstrating their disapproval of Sadat's efforts to achieve a political settlement with Israel.

But the Egyptian president continued to encourage Syrian President Hafez Assad to accept a disengagement agreement with Israel.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Sadat and Kissinger were continuing secret contacts on this subject during the American's visit to Moscow this week. Arab sources said they expected Kissinger to ask the Soviet leaders to join in pressing Assad for a disengagement agreement.

The sources said Assad personally favors such a move but has run into vigorous objections from radical members of his government. Egyptian Defense Minister Ahmed Ismail Ali will visit Damascus later this week to strengthen Assad's hand, the sources added.

The original purpose of the Tunis meeting was to prepare for an Arab summit conference some time next month to endorse the various peace moves.

King Hassan II of Morocco invited the summit to meet in Rabat, his capital, and Sadat quickly endorsed the invitation. His endorsement was generally viewed as an affront to President Moammar Khadafi of Libya, who has been a bitter enemy of the Moroccan monarch since 1971 and is not likely to go to Rabat. The atmosphere for a summit became even less favorable earlier this month when Libya and Syria refused to endorse the lifting of the oil embargo against the United States.

Morocco and Egypt have now proposed postponing the summit until September, apparently in the hope that Syria will have negotiated a disengagement agreement with Israel by that time. Arab League sources in Cairo said Egypt urged the delay because of continuing Libyan opposition and because Sadat is anxious to avoid widening the split in the Arab ranks.

Tourism officials hope for upswing in travel

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tourist industry officials are keeping their fingers crossed that the lifting of the Arab oil embargo will mean an upswing in travel.

"There's a feeling that people can plan at least limited vacations this summer," said Ken Miller, president of the Idaho Automobile Association. He said reports from gasoline dealers "are the most optimistic we've had for several months."

Officials noted that the oil will take several months to flow through the pipeline to the United States in the wake of last Monday's announcement that the embargo was over.

But they indicated that things won't be as bad as they were during January and February. An Associated Press survey showed that more gasoline stations were open over the weekend than on any Sunday since early December when President Nixon urged voluntary closings to conserve energy.

Nixon said last Tuesday that he was lifting that ban and Federal Energy Chief William E. Simon said tourism was a major reason for the action.

Simon said on Sunday that the sales ban "has had a significant impact on our conservation... but we have an industry that's critical to many of the states and that is tourism and leisure industry and this is a way to safely assist them."

He said that although the United States still doesn't have enough gasoline to meet the demand, April allocations would be "significantly larger" than the March allotments.

Simon, who was interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said specific allotments would be announced later this week. But he added that the states probably would get about 90 per cent of the amount they received in 1972 — up 5 per cent from this month.

Tourist officials expressed hope that business would improve.

Senate committee returns to face eight appropriations bills

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee returned to the capitol today to resume its deliberations on eight appropriations bills funding state agencies after taking a much-needed break from the budgetary matters Sunday.

Although the committee managed to get through bills appropriating funds for payment of interest owed by the state and operations of the Department of Revenue, public schools and the executive, judicial and other elective offices, it must still iron out and approve measures funding corrections and mental health, health and welfare, higher education and the operation of the legislature.

"We'll be discussing them on Tuesday and maybe even into Wednesday before we get ready to report them out," said Committee Chairman Norman Merrell, D-Monticello. The bills compose most of Missouri's $2 billion budget for the 1974-1975 fiscal year that starts in July.

Merrell has said he hopes to have the bills ready for debate on the Senate floor by next Monday.

"Time is definitely a factor because we must finish by April 22 at the latest under the joint rules," he said. Both the House and the Senate must approve the appropriations by that date.

Despite the fact that the committee managed to complete only about 60 per cent of its work during a morning-to-midnight session Friday and another that lasted as long on Saturday when the heavy snowfall made traveling treacherous, Merrell said he felt the committee "was making good progress."

The key reasons for the lengthy process in committee, according to the appropriations chief, are problems arising from the planned implementation of state reorganization in July and the necessity to redraft the bills forwarded from the House to delete the item-by-item allotments.

"House leaders have already agreed to accept these changes," Merrell said. "We have argued all along that they would make state government completely unworkable."

Aside from the rewriting work, Merrell said no major changes had been made in the totals of the bills handled so far.

Once approved by the Senate, however, the bills will go back to the House, where they are expected to be considered by a House-Senate conference committee that will attempt to work out any differences.

Arguments heard on Cason-Phelps matter

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Various laws give the lieutenant governor powers that the Missouri Senate is trying to take away, a lawyer for Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps told the Missouri Supreme Court today.

The court heard arguments on whether to continue a case brought by the attorney general last year, or to send it to circuit court.

Sen. William J. Cason, D-Clinton, Senate president pro tem, contends the high court ruled last year only on whether Phelps is the presiding officer. Cason seeks a declaratory judgement that Phelps cannot do anything but preside. A declaratory judgement case first is heard in a lower court.

Cason a year ago filed a case in Cole County Circuit Court, but it has not been pursued because the case was before the Supreme Court.

Phelps maintains the presiding officer can rule on points of order and assign bills to committee. But Cason contends those powers are to be set by Senate rules.

Attorney David Collins of Macon argued that laws written subsequent to the constitution give the presiding officer the authority to sign bills when they are passed and to rule on subpoenas. He said former Senate presidents pro tem have left it to the lieutenant governor to assign bills to committee.

Cason and Phelps did not appear for the oral arguments.

Cullen Coil, attorney for Cason, said the lieutenant governor has no implied powers, only those stated in the constitution and any other senators want to give him. The constitution gives the Senate authority to set its own rules which supersede any implied powers for the lieutenant governor, Coil said.

Judges James Finch asked whether the Senate rules might make the lieutenant governor little more than a "robot" in the Senate because he couldn't do anything but "stand up and sit down."

"The Senate," Coil said, "ought to be master of its own proceedings."

The court case began June 15, 1973 — the last day of the legislative session—when Cason had the sergeant-at-arms remove Phelps from the chamber.

The high court decided that Senate rules, saying the Senate could decide who shall preside, violated the constitutional clause saying the lieutenant governor shall be ex-officio president of the Senate and shall vote in case of ties.

Rock and roll entrepreneur presents success

Howard Stein presents ...

In the darkened Academy of Music, New York City, rock producer Howard Stein keeps intent vigil over the performance by the New Riders of the Purple Sage. A frustrated actor, his own onstage appearances are limited to brief announcements of upcoming acts. But lights on the marquees blaze out: "Howard Stein Presents..." And he expects to gross $4.5 million this year, with more than 250 concerts in five major cities.

NEW YORK (AP) — Meet Howard Stein. A 31-year-old prisoner of his own success. Caught between two generations.

On the one hand he is the hippie-clad entrepreneur with the Afro hairdo who sold American teen-agers on The Grateful Dead, Joe Cocker, Janis Joplin, Cat Stevens and other rock groups.

On the other, he is the modish-styled former insurance salesman who likes to smoke cigars, shuns whisky and marijuana and really prefers the golden oldies of the 30's and 40's.

"Perhaps more profound men are less concerned with image," says Stein, who grossed $4.5 million last year. "I'm still concerned with image for whatever reasons."

He put on more than 250 concerts last year in five major cities, New York, Miami, Atlanta, Chicago and Minneapolis. The marquee reads: "Howard Stein Presents." The ads read, "Howard Stein Presents." Some day, says Howard Stein, it will be "Howard Stein Presents Howard Stein."

Because Howard Stein is really a frustrated actor. In love with Broadway and film, he enrolled in Carnegie Tech, where, "I was something of the golden boy of the acting department."

His mother knew what he was doing, but his father thought for two years that he was studying to be a doctor. When he found out, he pulled young Howard out of school.

So Howard tried creative writing — "whatever that is" — at Columbia University, still studying some subversive acting on the side.

"Even though I was an acting student, I still had the horrible fear of not doing well at school ... I hated school ... I despised it from the first year. Yech, I hated it."

Cooperative on cancer is proposed

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — The President of the American Cancer Society has proposed a worldwide cooperative effort to dig out knowledge which "would be useful for immediate application to cancer control."

Out of the annual toll of 350,000 cancer deaths, "at least 100,000 American lives that we know about are needlessly lost to cancer each year," Dr. Justin N. Stein told a Cancer Society seminar for science writers Sunday.

Most of those facing high risks of contracting cancer of the lungs, breasts, stomach, cervix, colon and rectum, could be saved by earlier diagnosis or by avoiding some risks. These include cigarette smoking in case of lung cancers, or exposure to chemicals in the environment, Dr. Stein said.

He proposed a formalized system embracing efforts of the American Cancer Society, National Cancer Institute, state health departments, medical societies, World Health Organization, and the International Union Against Cancer. The aim would be to protect high-risk people by informing them of solid facts.

To identify the high-risk people, "much remains to be learned about environmental influences, industrial hazards, ecological factors such as atmospheric and water pollution in this country. But much is known to permit us now to make a greater effort toward saving the lives of those who die needlessly every year," Dr. Stein said.

Come Meet Your Candidates

Demo. City Comm.

The year at Columbia ended with what he calls "a familial schism." So he worked as a publishing house clerk and sometime performer, met Helen Mancuso and married her in 1965.

"I could never be a starving actor," he realized. "My desire to be comfortable — very rich — was still dominant, but I couldn't look in the newspaper under 'Boss Wanted.'"

Then his father, hoping to salvage what looked like a college dropout, relented on the issue of a medical education and settled instead for just plain college. So Howard Stein graduated finally from New York University — only to discover he had no profession.

What next, Howard Stein? He studied insurance.

"I know nothing about insurance. I knew nothing about insurance. I don't know what I was doing in that class."

So much for insurance.

Next he withdrew $12,500 in inheritance and Bar Mitzvah money and teamed up with an uncle to sell rock 'n roll souvenirs, like Herman's Hermits rings, around the country.

And suddenly there he was in the wonderful world of rock 'n roll. He met the managers, the agents, the bands. His first rock concert in the summer of 1969 lost money. He learned a lot.

For six months he was out of work, finally raising $50,000 from friends to stage a concert in Toronto. The star didn't show.

"That company went out of business. Like all new producers, I was cheated, dictated to, robbed and bulldozed." But he learned.

He finally hit and began promoting one-night stands in Carnegie Hall. There came a two-night stand with the Rolling Stones at Madison Square Garden, and success.

Stein brashly wore his hair in

Welcome words

Howard Stein couldn't ask for a better notice than the "Sold Out" sign hanging beside him at the box office of New York's Academy of Music. Stein is now one of the nation's top rock producers. He considers he's good enough to take losses on only about 15 per cent of his shows, but it's the losses that hurt. "You're only as good as your worst show," he says. And it's a fight to stay on top.

a permanent-curl Afro and spent $2,000 a week for his hippie dress. He staged Janis Joplin, James Taylor and Cat Stevens, although he is too inhibited to dance a step to their music.

He's made it now, has shed the bizarre clothes and clipped the hair. He lives in a luxurious Park Avenue apartment, owns a 1961 Rolls Royce, collects art deco furniture and stays in the presidential suites of hotels.

He says he always lived as though he was successful, but now the fact has caught up with the fiction.

"I can't handle myself if I'm not succeeding, and success is being more, doing more and having more than yesterday. What I'm trying to do is find out how to be happy with success."

So here the worry surfaces, behind the affluence. Worry, too, about the losses, on about 15 per cent of his shows. They hurt, he concedes, psychically as well as financially.

Shuffling among his concert cities, Stein is also worried about the time he has to spend away from home. He'd like to see more of his 7-year-old daughter, his 4-year-old son and his wife. He regrets not being able to do what he wants to do. And still he worries about his status, that it continues to rise, that, like a helium balloon, he floats skyward.

Sitting in the lap of success, sipping a glass of vintage French wine, Howard Stein's sad brown eyes betray his smile.

He plunges on, talks of the challenge, the fight to stay on top, to rise higher, and says finally, "I'm never going to give this up, mind you, because I had to scramble to get where I am." A prisoner of success.

Three killed in accidents

By The Associated Press
Three persons died in separate accidents on Missouri highways over the weekend.

Rebecca Lynn Holloway, 16, Raytown, Mo., was killed and another Raytown youth was in serious condition following a one-car accident Sunday near Lexington. The highway patrol, which identified Miss Holloway's companion as Mark White, 21, said his car went off a county route and struck a creek bank.

On Saturday, Troy Lee Davis, 45, Kansas City, was killed when his westbound car skidded across the median on Interstate 70 on Columbia's west edge into an embankment alongside the eastbound lane and overturned.

Orval Joseph Martin, 63, Collins, died Friday night when a car in which he was a passenger collided with a pickup truck on Missouri 13 just north of Collins in southwest Missouri.

For Women

Club notes

At the regular meeting of the Happy Homemakers Extension Club, Mrs. Frank Weller gave a lecture on beauty hints, attractive posture and health care.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. William Kellin. Mrs. Ruby Rehmer, president, conducted the meeting.

Election of officers was conducted Thursday at the Nautilus MFWC Club meeting. Re-elected for another year were: Miss Mildred Rogers, president; Mrs. Vernon McMullin, vice president; Miss Mary Anderson, recording secretary; Mrs. Earl Thompson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elan Keller, parliamentarian; Mrs. Ralph Hollenbeck, reporter; and Mrs. George Swope, devotional.

It was announced Miss Joy Jones will represent LaMonte High School at the Sophomore Pilgrimage to be held in Jefferson City next month.

Ordell Sholl, superintendent of LaMonte school, spoke on "Public Affairs," giving a resume of the growth, progress and achievements of the school since 1960 and also hopes and plans for the future.

The United Methodist Womens Club met Wednesday with Mrs. Clinton Lowrey. Mrs. Robert Gregory and Mrs. Paul McKee continued the study on Ephesians. Mrs. Broadus Wiley was a guest at the meeting attended by 11 members.

The Pettis County Historical Society met Tuesday at the Sedalia Public Library. Larry Melton discussed the Scott Joplin Festival and the society made tentative plans for cooperating.

W. A. McVey spoke on "Old Roads and Trails" as Pat Clark painted his conception of the main street of Farmers City, an 1857 settlement about five miles east of the present Sedalia.

The Brick Extension Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Arthur Frey. The roll call, "My spring wardrobe," was answered by ten members. A donation was made to a youth camp for underprivileged children.

Mrs. Burford Jenkins gave the lesson, "Mirror, Mirror on the Wall," telling ways to be attractive at all times and stressing that beauty is more than skin deep.

Summer cover-up

Transparent leg make-up and body bronzers are particularly helpful during the summer. They cover close-to-the-surface veins and even out tans.

Tan alters make-up

Tanned skin requires different make-up than one that is winter pale. Experiment with color. A peach blusher is great for the transition period between a pallor and tan. Pastel shadows look spectacular against tanned skins.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Regina Robbins bristled when a reporter broached the subject of women's liberation.

"I'm doing what I want to do. Just leave it at that," snapped Miss Robbins, 23, proudly wearing the gray uniform of the New York State Police. "I'm not out to prove anything."

"You look very cute in that hat," her brother, Alan, 27, interjected with a straight face.

Miss Robbins and three others became the first women troopers in the 57-year history of the State Police in ceremonies in early January held with all due publicity at a movie theater here.

But Miss Robbins stood out. A cum laude graduate of Syracuse University from Binghamton, N.Y., she topped her class academically at the State Police Academy, outscoring 120 men. The feat came as no surprise to her family.

"She can shoot the pants off me at the rifle range, I'll tell you that," said her father, George.

Her brother believes the 5-foot-6, 114-pound trooper can handle any situation. "I fought with her years ago and I'd say she can do anything a man can do. She gets mad," Alan said.

State Police Supt. William

Kirwan vowed that the women's duties would be "exactly the same as that of a male trooper." He acknowledged, however, that they would not be assigned to handle prison riots or long searches in rugged terrain where stamina is essential.

"If it comes to a real donnybrook situation where we need people, we can use the women as support even under those circumstances," he added.

Miss Robbins and the three other women — a fifth dropped out during training — graduated with the man who had tried to stop their appointment. Thomas Button, an Albion, N.Y., village patrolman, had filed a suit contending he was the victim of sex discrimination, saying all except Miss Robbins scored lower than he did on competitive examinations.

Miss Robbins admitted the publicity "made things more difficult, it really did. But now I think the novelty will wear off."

The other women troopers are Carol Johnston, 24, of Geneva, N.Y.; Maureen P. Gordinier, 21, of Rochester, N.Y., and Carol Desell, 23, of Watervliet, N.Y.

Use soy protein to save money

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Would you be interested in saving around 63 cents on every 1½ pounds of hamburger you serve?

Then consider the expertise of a young woman in business who prepares dinner for her family, consisting of her husband and two young children, ages 9 and 6. She uses a package of texturized soy protein to do the trick. More home use of soy protein is possibly today through use of giant contractors to remove the oil from soybean to form the flakes which are the basis of a wide range of food products. Three such are soy flour, soy concentrate and soy isolate. Because of soybean's high rate of protein, the textured foods have practically the same protein rating as meat products.

Cutting meat costs can result, for example, with use of one package of texturized soy protein with one pound of chopped round steak. The texturized soy protein costs 29 cents.

Water is added to the texturized protein until it is the consistency of bread dough. Then it is blended into the pound of chopped beef. She pan broils it.

"My family is not aware of the addition of soy protein. They just eat it, which is a good way to tell me they like it," she says.

"It does stick a little to the pan because the soy protein absorbs fats and juices. It doesn't shrink quite so much as pure beef, either."

Persons eating this mixture are getting meat with less cholesterol in an almost perfect protein. "So you can understand," the young homemaker adds, "why I use it often during these days of terrible inflation. I use it in my meat loaves, meat balls and other beef dishes. Everyone likes it."

Most supermarkets now sell texturized soy protein. Some is fortified with vitamins or minerals. Read the labels carefully for this information.

Many markets also sell mixtures of chopped beef and soy protein in plastic trays, just like other meats. They are clearly marked. They sell at about 20 to 25 cents less than all-meat and are gaining greater homemaker acceptance daily, markets report.

We asked a spokesman for the American Meat Institute what its attitude was toward use of textured soy protein. The answer was:

"We consider it an important supplement to beef but a substitute. For most satisfactory results use a mixture of 75 per cent beef and 25 per cent textured soy. It is used in school lunches," he says, "and also in myriad commercial products such as chili con carne, frozen beef patties, meat sauces and the like."

Beside being used as an extender for ground beef, textured soy in form of analogs are used as alternates to meat.

Polly's pointers

Now poor time to waste food

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — Watching people prepare various recipes at a cooking demonstration where so much food is wasted is my Pet Peeve. My mother and home economics teacher taught us to scrape bowls, pans, etc., clean and not to waste food. — IDAIRE

DEAR POLLY — I am answering Mary Louise who wants to know how to clean her fur bonnet. Years ago when cleaners were not so numerous I cleaned my furs with corn meal and have been doing it ever since. If the fur item is not too large put it in a paper sack with some corn meal and shake it around until it has absorbed the dirt. Remove item and if it is still dirty repeat the process with clean meal. — GLADYS

DEAR POLLY — Mary Louise can use corn meal to clean her fur bonnet. Rub corn meal in well and let it stay on the hat overnight. The next day gently shake the hat and brush with a soft hair brush. This draws out any oil, etc. Sometimes I do it twice. — BARBARA

DEAR POLLY — When I knit I always copy my pattern in a spiral notebook and where it says to make even rows of one stitch I write 1,2,3,4,5,6,7 or whatever in my book. As I knit I check off each number after I have made that row. If I have to put my work aside for a while or even a few weeks I always know just where I stopped so always keep my pattern even. This is especially good when making sleeves so the two are alike.

I also jot down any changes I make in the pattern. By going over all of this I study the pattern before I start and can work out any changes I want and do not have to undo work already done. I also write down the required amount of yarn needed so I know if I am using the same pattern again. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN — When knitting two sleeves or any such pieces I want to be exactly alike I do them at the same time on the same needle with two balls of yarn. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I put a silk scarf over my head to save my hairdo when a dress has to be pulled over my head. Hold three corners in the mouth and do the same when taking the garment off. — JO

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I hope some of the readers can tell me what can be done with sample patches of imitation leather. I have about 1,000 pieces each of three-inch circles and pieces 2½ x 5 inches with a small hole about ½ inch from the edges. Thanks for any help. — MRS. S.W.C.

DEAR POLLY — Now we are all very conscious of coupons and any ways we can save a bit here and there on food and many other items. I had an unused recipe file box so I made tabs for it that say "Laundry," "Food," "Bathroom," "Grooming," "Cats and Dogs" and "Miscellaneous." Each time I come into possession of a coupon I file it in its proper place. Before going shopping I check my list against the coupons in the file and take along those I can use. I have saved quite a few pennies that way. To be more conscious of what I have saved I put the "coupon money" in a separate container and have it ready for buying small inexpensive extras. — MRS. T.F.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas — If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss . . . and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss . . . but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation. Adv.

New irregularities found through milk-fund affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unfolding story of the milk-fund affair has turned up new irregularities in the 1972 campaign finances of several Democrats, including Rep. Wilbur D. Mills and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

Associated Milk Producers Inc., the nation's largest dairy cooperative, paid $137,000 in corporation funds to help buy costly computer-mail lists for Humphrey, Sen. James Abourezk of South Dakota, Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas, Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma, and the Iowa Democratic party of Sen. Harold Hughes.

A Watergate grand jury has heard testimony about the payments. Federal law prohibits use of corporation funds to assist campaigns.

And the giant dairy cooperative reportedly used company funds to pay salaries and expenses, including apartment and furniture rent, for two key workers in the draft-Mills campaign in the last months of 1971 and the early weeks of 1972, before the Arkansas Democrat announced himself as an active presidential candidate. The payments are outlined in a report commissioned by the cooperative's board, which was obtained from court records.

According to officials of the Minneapolis computer-mail firm of Valentine, Sherman and Associates, the milk producers paid:

—$50,000 for a list of rural Iowans. The Iowa Democratic party, which requested the list, paid $10,000. Sen. Hughes said he and state party officials didn't know the money was from company funds.

He said the cooperative offered to help pay for the list after he declined an offer of a contribution to his unannounced presidential campaign.

—$7,000 for a list for Abourezk, who was then running for the Senate seat he holds now. Abourezk paid $13,000. He said he hadn't been told the milk producers used corporate money, and would have refused it if he had known.

—$30,000 for a list requested by Gov. Docking of Kansas. The state party failed to pay its half, and the list wasn't completed. Docking's Press Secretary James C. Shaffer said Sunday night the governor would have no comment.

—$25,000 for a list sought by Gov. Hall of Oklahoma. This project also was abandoned after the state party failed to pay its share. Hall could not be reached immediately for comment.

—$25,000 for lists for Humphrey's 1972 presidential primary campaigns in Maryland and Florida. The Minnesota Democrat said through a spokesman he could shed no light on the payment. Humphrey referred newsmen to his former campaign manager, Minneapolis lawyer Jack Chestnut, who also said he didn't know about the $25,000.

Associated Milk Producers is the same group under investigation, with two other dairy cooperatives, for allegedly trying to pay $300,000 to a Nixon fund raiser to have a antitrust suit killed.

After the milk producers paid for all the lists, the Valentine, Sherman firm falsified correspondence and invoices covering the transactions. The firm says the forgery was the coop's idea, but the milk producers blame the computer-mail outfit.

Coop officials originally claimed they wanted to share costs of the lists so they could have access to them for possible future use in case they entered the insurance business, according to a report to the board by lawyer Edward L. Wright, a former American Bar Association president. This might have established a legitimate business purpose for the corporate payments.

But the coop never dealt in insurance and never used the computer lists, Wright reported.

All Kansas City schools will be closed Tuesday

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dr. Robert Medcalf, Kansas City school superintendent, announced today all schools and programs would close Tuesday because of the teachers strike.

Medcalf said his decision was necessitated by a concern for the health and safety of pupils, the welfare of non-striking employees and the "continued destruction of district property."

"I realize," Medcalf said in a statement, "that the closing of schools will create additional hardships for parents who have depended on our schools to do the best possible job for their children."

"I am certain, however, that parents and patrons will appreciate our not opening schools if we cannot guarantee the safety of our children."

Medcalf said the reopening of schools would depend on "a sufficient number of employees willing to return to work." He did not indicate when that might be.

Medcalf had said Sunday that the resumption of negotiations was "imminent."

However, Norman B. Hudson, president of Local 691 of the American Federation of Teachers, said at about the same time that informal contacts between the two sides had "broken down" and had "reached a stalemate." Prospects for a settlement stood about the same as they did last Thursday, when plans for informal communications were first revealed, Hudson said.

There are more than 60,000 students enrolled in the Kansas City district's 100 schools. The union claims it represents 2,500 contract teachers of the district's some 3,500 teachers, librarians, counselors and paraprofessionals.

School officials said less than 700 instructors were on duty Friday and only 16,382 students were in attendance.

A group of parents and representatives of various community organizations is continuing to urge that the schools be closed to ensure the safety of the children and because, they contend, education cannot be provided in the present situation.

Hudson, who was served a restraining order Saturday — five days after the injunction was issued by the Jackson County Circuit Court against the strike action—told a teachers' rally Sunday: "The court ordered I read this to you. I have said to you, 'Don't strike. Do not picket.'"

"Hell no, we won't go," the teachers chanted in response.

The podium was taken by Mrs. Dorothy M. White, the local's vice president, who said:

"Until they get me, I'll do the talking. I want to assure you that after they get me, there will be someone to follow me. The union will never be without leadership."

Mrs. White said the teachers were resolved to "keep on sailing until we reach a safe port and a safe port is a just contract."

Negotiations broke off March 15 after the teachers rejected a 5.5 per cent pay increase. Hudson says the district also has refused to bargain in good faith on some 40 other contract items, including teachers' grievance procedures and a demand for smaller class sizes.

Will question local school board candidates

Candidates for the Sedalia School District 200 board of education will answer questions tonight in the second "know your candidates" forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

The meeting, to begin at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building council chambers, will follow the same format as the League's earlier meeting for City Council and mayoral candidates. Candidates will answer questions submitted by the League and later respond to written questions from the audience.

Mrs. John Ellison, a spokesman for the League, said that all board candidates, with the exception of incumbent Mrs. Jane Dugan, will appear tonight. The other candidates are former board member Mrs. Paul Hausam, Mrs. Alyce Williams and Eugene Sims.

Skull fracture suffered during work accident

A LaMonte man was taken to Bothwell Hospital with a skull fracture Sunday morning after he was struck by a cable that whiplashed when the cablehook snapped during an attempt to pull a derailed railroad car off the trucks.

Dale Beel, 26, was listed as in not serious condition Monday morning. A hospital spokesman said Beel had a skull fracture and fractures of the ribs and left arm. The spokesman said Beel was taken to the Intensive Care Unit of the hospital after surgery Sunday but was moved to a regular hospital room Monday morning.

The accident occurred as a railroad work crew attempted to move three derailed cars from the tracks about three miles east of Beaman about 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

R. W. Robbins, a trainmaster for the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad, told The Democrat-Capital that the cars derailed shortly before 3:30 a.m. Sunday after hitting a section of broken rail. Three cars of the approximately 100-car train went off the track.

Robbins said that a "caboose cable," about one-inch thick, was being used in an attempt to pull the derailed cars off the track when the hook on the cable snapped, causing the cable to whiplash.

Robbins said that following the accident the three cars were removed from the rails and the train continued to its destination. The derailed cars were still off the track Monday morning, he added.

Woodcock calls on Congress to impeach Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock today called on Congress to proceed with the impeachment of President Nixon saying that is the only way to end the constitutional crisis now facing the country.

Woodcock noted that until now he had favored Nixon's resignation, but said this would only leave the "myth of a martyred President."

"The Congress must do its duty and proceed with impeachment," he told 1,000 cheering delegates to the annual legislative conference sponsored by the UAW and the Machinists Union.

The union leader said the democratic majority in Congress must act on impeachment even at the risk of drawing charges of partisan politics. "Let the facts speak for themselves because there is no other way," he said.

Woodcock had called for Nixon's resignation following the firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox last October, but the union leader said that he now preferred impeachment in light of the events and "White House manipulations" since then.

Woodcock and Machinists President Floyd Smith urged rank and file delegates here for the three day meeting to lobby in Congress for passage of national health insurance, tax reform and reformation of the federal workmen's compensation system. Woodcock repeated his call for enactment of temporary quotas on auto imports to help the hard-pressed U.S. auto industry.

Arraignment held for 2 county men

Two area men were arraigned in Pettis County Court Magistrate Court Monday on charges of stealing more than $50 of merchandise.

Held in the county jail in lieu of $3,500 bond each are Jimmie Dale Allen, 17, Knob Noster; and Eddie Lee Hontz, 26, LaMonte. Their preliminary hearings have been set for April 9.

The two are charged with stealing five rolls of copper wire Saturday night from a Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. lot on Industrial Drive in Sedalia.

They were arrested Saturday night in LaMonte by Lonnie Lane, deputy city marshal, Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said. Lane stopped the car the two men were riding in after county authorities gave him a description of the car believed to have been used in the theft.

Lane held the two men until he was assisted by the Highway Patrol, who took the men to the county jail.

What's A Funeral All About?

It's about someone who lived among friends and relatives. Someone who has made impressions on other people. Someone who will be remembered by them.

In short, a funeral is about a human being.

FOOD & FIBER NEWS

University of Missouri Extension Centers
Henry - Johnson - Lafayette - Pettis

A University of Missouri conference on land use is scheduled for Thursday at the Memorial Union, Columbia.

The conference, titled "Pressing Land Use Issues," is intended to explore the increased pressures for the development and implementation of land use policy.

Bull sale
Performance tested bulls, offered twice a year at the Missouri-Columbia Livestock Center, will be auctioned April 5 at the 17th Missouri All-Breed Bull Sale.

Totaling 148 head, the sale will offer 60 Polled Herefords, 70 Angus, 12 Herefords, 2 Charolais and 4 Simmental.

Two of the criteria for the sale have been raised since the last sale. Instead of weighing 950 pounds and standing 43 inches high at 365 days, the bulls selected for the sale will have to weigh 1,000 pounds and stand 44 inches at a year.

This sale will include animals born June through November, 1972. They were picked from about 1,500 now on test.

Alfalfa weevil
Alfalfa fields 6 inches to 10 inches tall are showing from 50 to 100 per cent of the growing terminals infested with alfalfa weevil larvae. Counts from 1 to 9 larvae per stem were recorded with about 4 larvae per stem average. That is twice the number that will cause economic damage. Early spring temperatures in the 60's to 80's have incubated overwintering eggs and stimulated adult weevils to resume egg production.

Treatments are going to be necessary earlier than predicted in the 1974 alfalfa weevil M. U. Guide Sheet. Damage will continue to accumulate even at temperatures of 40 degrees or below and growing terminals may soon be injured sufficiently to retard or prevent further growth.

Treatments applied now should give the first cutting a chance to outgrow the effects of weevil feeding, though larvae developing 3 to 4 weeks from now may suggest a timely cutting and a stubble spray application.

Be aware of those chemicals that may be used only once per season or per cutting in the event of a second treatment being needed. Insecticides that are legal and effective enough to be used for weevil larva control are Alfa-tox, Imidan or Malathion.

Hog profits
Things sure seem to change in a hurry these days. It looked like by the second week of March, about one-third of the hog producers might be breaking even, one-third losing $8 per head, and the more cost efficient one-third might still have a labor and management return of $12 to $15 per head.

This illustrates another important principle. Good production at low cost gives you insurance against the effects of inflation. It also gives you some insurance against the effects of sudden change in price. Agriculture never has been in a "cost plus" pricing situation, and likely never will be.

Save nitrogen
It's a bit late to plan on adding a legume to your pastures, but a 30 per cent or so stand of legumes in grass is the equivalent to an application of 100 or more pounds of nitrogen per acre. If you have a pasture you plan to fertilize that has this much legume why not consider phosphate and potash only? Feed the legume, let it feed the grass, and use nitrogen on corn. Besides, some work done at Southern Illinois indicates 20 to 25 pounds higher weaning weights and 10 to 20 per cent better conception rates on grass-legume pastures than on grass plus nitrogen.

Fertilizer dollars
I don't see how you can feel you are making sound decisions on fertilizer use if you don't use soil tests as a guide. Soil tests are not expensive. The average per acre cost is less than 10 cents. Sure, it takes some time to pull the same — probably half an hour. But at $5 an hour this is only about 15 cents an acre.

You farm a number of fields. You tend to treat them all the same when you apply fertilizer. Each field is a little different because of the kind of soil and its history. Only by knowing what nutrients are available, field by field, and comparing this to crop needs, can you fairly accurately allocate your fertilizer.

Pasturing of wheat
How late in the spring can wheat be pastured and still produce a minimum yield of grain? This is a question coming from many livestock men.

Wheat that has not been pastured, should not be pastured in April.

In normal seasons, wheat can be pastured until mid-April without any significant reduction in yield. If the wheat makes a slow start in growth because of late cold weather or a shortage of moisture, any spring pasturing may cut yields.

On the other hand, if early vigorous growth is made, pasturing as late as May 1st may not reduce yields significantly. Such late pasturing may be justified where pastures are backward and hay supplies are low.

Sign-up dates set for 1974 RECP plan

Dick Dalton, executive director of the Pettis County ASCS office, has announced the sign-up dates for the 1974 Rural Environmental Conservation Program. Producers interested in the annual program should sign up April 1 through 19, and those who want the long-term RECP agreement must sign up between April 1 and 12.

Dalton also said meetings to discuss the 1974 RECP plan would be held Monday in the LaMonte School multi-purpose room; Tuesday in the Federal Building in Sedalia; and Wednesday at the Smithton School. Each meeting begins at 7:30 p.m.

Ann Landers

Daughter's date finds mom skinny-dipping

Dear Ann: I'm 37, the mother of a beautiful teen-age daughter who comes by her looks naturally. (I was a finalist in a national beauty contest in the late '50s). We look more like sisters than mother and daughter. Like many other women, I do my housework in the nude. When the weather is pleasant I slip out for a skinny-dip in our secluded, private pool. My husband takes frequent business trips but when he's home he often joins me.

Our daughter has a handsome 17-year-old boyfriend. In spite of Rick's tender age, I find myself attracted to him. He has always treated me with respect and I've kept my infatuation well concealed.

Last week I was enjoying a nude swim when Rick suddenly appeared at the side of the pool. I was speechless with embarrassment. To make me feel "at ease," he calmly disrobed and joined me. Rick is built like a Greek god and we cavorted playfully in reckless abandon. It ended when he kissed me in a way that made my head twirl.

Now Rick wants me to be his "Mrs. Robinson," arguing that many middle-aged women have young lovers. I'm tempted, but scared to death. If my daughter found out she'd be furious.

I have a 33-year-old divorced neighbor who would be crazy about Rick. I've thought of introducing them to get him off my trail. In the meantime I'm having nightmares. I haven't been skinny-dipping since. This letter is no phony from Yale. It's a REAL problem, and I need help in — Marin County.

Dear Ann: Inform Rick that he is not welcome to drop around your pool uninvited. When he comes to see your daughter, get lost, Ma. And don't introduce him to anybody. I'll bet this kid already knows several middle-aged women. Let's hope Rick doesn't have a loose lip or you could be in for the hassle of your life.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of the recent research project which revealed that men who smoke pipes are viewed by women as "sexier, superior intellects, more mature, sincere, attractive, stable and masculine"? This survey was conducted by a local psychology institute. Can a pipe give a man all those enviable qualities? — Bay Area Ann Fan

Dear Bay: A pipe can't give a man ANY of those enviable qualities. The survey merely said women VIEW men who smoke pipes as "sexier, superior intellects, etc."

Did you know the research project was commissioned by a pipe manufacturer in Burlingame, California?

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for 20 years and you are a quack. My diagnosis is based on a detailed computerized analysis. You have produced only 79 original answers since 1953. Since you write seven days a week, this means you give only one honest-to-goodness reply every 93 days.

The other 92 days you sneak by with "seek professional help" or "see your clergyman" or "you Yale guys make me sick. Knock it off." You are a phony. — Close Observer

Dear C.O.: I've been writing this column for 18 years, not 20. Among your other "gifts" are you also a clairvoyant? You'd have to be to see me coming two years before I appeared.

Missouri Democrats reduce campaign debt

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's Democratic party has reduced its 1972 campaign debt from $60,000 to $39,000, says the state chairman, David Donnelly of Lebanon.

Donnelly told a state committee meeting here Saturday during the Jackson Day celebrations that he would like to see a "professional, solid organization" molded for the 1976 elections.

"We're on the right track," he said.

The Jefferson City headquarters now has three fulltime employees. Donnelly said he wants to have three state headquarters — one in Jefferson City, one in St. Louis and one in Kansas City.

The state committee also is planning to lease a larger building in Jefferson City, he said.

Another goal is establishment of a speaker's bureau, Donnelly said.

Mick Buehler, who worked for Rep. Richard Ichord and handled publicity for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Edward Dowd in 1972, has taken over the "Committee of 10,000" plan started by state Treasurer James I. Spainhower.

While less than 1,000 persons have joined the club in his four months of work, Buehler said, 47 persons have contributed $1,000, making them members of the "Muleskinners' Club."

Among those are Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton, Spainhower, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler, St. Louis Mayor John Poelker, former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, and the Democratic legislative leaders — William Cason, Richard Rabbitt, Kenneth Rothman, Lawrence Lee and Richard DeCoster.

The contribution plan is broken down into various contributions: $5 a month for a sustaining member, $10 a month for a "grassrooter," $25 a month for a "true Truman Democrat," and $1000 a year for the Muleskinners.

About 300 persons bought tickets for the Saturday sponsor's luncheon, priced at $100 a person and $120 for couples.

Spainhower and deputy Secretary of State James Dowd called for help in registering voters and in spreading out the financing of the party among the rank and file.

Missouri has about 515,000 potential voters who are unregistered, Dowd said.

Spainhower, a strong proponent of the $1 campaign check-off on income tax returns, said it could mean more than $200,000 a year for each political party in Missouri. The 2-year-old check-off on federal returns has increased from 3.5 per cent participation in its first year to 14 per cent participation this year, Spainhower said.

The Missouri House removed the $1 checkoff contribution from a campaign spending reform bill and Spainhower has asked the senators to put it back on.

And he warned, if the Democratic controlled legislature does not pass a campaign spending bill, the Republicans will "beat us over the heads with it" during this year's campaign.

Private Richard L. Anderson, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Anderson, 306 North Quincy, recently completed nine weeks of advanced individual training at the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, Ft. Polk, La.

Teamwork was emphasized as he learned to work as a member of a rifle squad, mortar squad or with the direct fire section.

Army Spec. 5 Raymond L. Honeycutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond G. Honeycutt, Windsor, has been assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea. He is an assistant personnel staff officer with the division's Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 15th Field Artillery at Camp Stanley.

His wife, Lois Honeycutt, resides in Windsor.

Mexico may diminish as live cattle source

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said today Mexico may diminish in the distant future as a major source of live cattle for U.S. feedlots and boneless beef because of growing demand among Mexican consumers.

But Mexico also is a big buyer of U.S. livestock and related products, including dairy breeding animals and frozen bull semen. Thus, a report by the Foreign Agricultural Service said, the two-way trade is expected to continue brisk for "at least another five years."

"But over the longterm, the outlook is somewhat uncertain as Mexico's population increases and fewer live cattle are available for export," the report said.

Mexican feeder cattle have been an important source for many feedlot operators in the southwest, although the imports have fluctuated widely in recent years. Those totaled about 700,000 head in calendar 1973, down from 916,000 in 1972, as the Mexican government held down shipments of both live cattle and beef to help relieve rising meat costs at home.

Sales of U.S. cattle and livestock products have soared, meanwhile, including more than 14,000 dairy breeding cattle worth $7.6 million during the 1972-73 fiscal year ended last June 30. That was up from about 8,000 head sold for $3.7 million the year before.

James K. Freckmann, assistant U.S. agriculture attaché in Mexico City, said that in the first four months of the fiscal year that began last July 1 dairy cattle sales to Mexico totaled more than 8,000 head worth $4.5 million, reflecting higher prices per animal.

"Of growing importance have been U.S. exports of frozen bull semen," Freckmann said. "In fiscal 1972, those exports were valued at $65,000, while last year they grew to $270,000 and reached $110,000 during the first four months of fiscal 1974."

St. Louis may get hearing on road proposal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Chief Missouri Highway Department Engineer Robert H. Hunter says hearings on the proposed Chicago-Kansas City interstate highway may be held in St. Louis.

"If it is necessary, perhaps one hearing would be held in St. Louis," Hunter said Saturday.

He added that highway department officials had hoped to hear from St. Louis area interests at hearings scheduled this week in Independence, Macon and Hannibal.

Get consistent weed control in corn, and minimize carryover:

Lasso Plus atrazine.

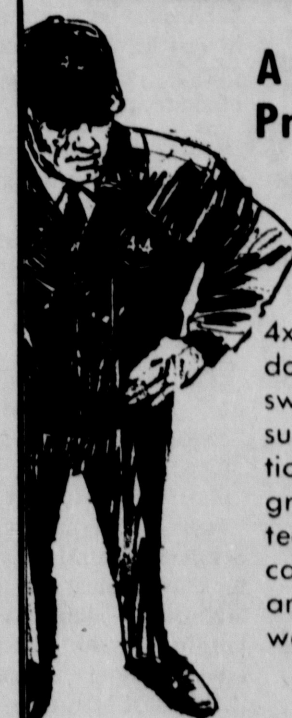

Lasso plus atrazine controls giant and many other foxtails, fall panicum, crabgrass, common ragweed and many other weeds. It also reduces competition from buttonweed and cocklebur. And you use less atrazine in the tank mix, so you minimize the possibility of carryover. Because Lasso by itself leaves no carryover.

Postal problems

Most companies, especially those that rely heavily on the mail to conduct their businesses, are facing a "first-class dilemma" as a result of the recent 25 per cent increase in postal rates, according to a survey of several dozen companies across the nation conducted by DRI Communications Services.

The basic question is not "To mail or not to mail" but "To charge or not to charge the customer."

Some firms are already neutralizing the increases by passing them along to their customers, says Alan R. Mount, president of DRI. Others are actively trimming their mailing lists and using lightweight paper stocks. Some are considering utilizing more third-class mail, but this not always practical.

The executive of one company, which annually mails more than five million pieces of mail, complains that "In the past, if we mailed two months in advance (by third class), many of our customers would receive the announcement of a major conference two weeks after the meeting had taken place."

As a further "vote of confidence" in the Postal Service, the DRI survey also found that more than half of the companies contacted doubted that the increased cost of postage would result in improved mail delivery.

During the New York Post Office strike a few years ago, one Wall Street firm delivered mail to its branch offices and customers by chauffeured limousine, notes Mount.

"It would almost pay companies to do it today," he says. "If they could get the gas." (NEA)

Art benefit good idea

The Sedalia Art Association did the community in general, and State Fair Community College in particular, a service Friday when it staged its first benefit art and craft sale.

Not only was the sale an opportunity to help needy art students at the junior college (it raised enough for two full-year scholarships), but it gave Sedalians a chance to view and purchase the works of more than 30 local and area artists and craftsmen. It was apparent from the show that talent in these areas is in plentiful supply.

The art association hopes to make the benefit sale an annual, or at least a biennial, affair. We think that would be a fine idea.

A conservative view

Legal aid measure should be dumped

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It is a familiar rule of parliamentary procedure that a motion to reconsider can be made only by a member of the prevailing faction. Because I have long supported the concept of legal services for the poor, perhaps I am qualified to turn against the bill soon to be reported from a conference committee. Mr. President, I would like to say, I move to reconsider.

By every indication, the compromise legal services bill will be fairly close to the Nelson-Javits bill approved by the Senate in December. The bill is an abomination. It is a perversion of the whole concept of giving the poor person a chance at equal justice under the law. If the Senate and House should agree to this devious proposition, the President will have to be asked to use his veto power.

In supporting a legal services act, I have been guided by certain principles and observations that seem to me almost beyond dispute. The first is that the concept of equal justice under law is among the greatest ideals of our political system. The second is that our nation has served that concept poorly. Despite impressive improvements in recent years, especially in the appointment of public defenders in criminal cases, we still have two systems of law — one for the rich, another for the poor.

A system of federally subsidized legal aid should have but one purpose, and that is to redress the imbalance. The poor family that has been bilked into a usurious installment contract should not be helpless at the hands of a well-heeled merchant. The poor person wrongly evicted from his home should have some aid in standing up to the slumlord. The ignorant or illiterate citizen, struggling with the complexities of a highly regulated society, often needs legal advice that he cannot possibly afford.

A revitalized program of federal legal aid ought to have these aims in mind, and these aims only. Because the possibilities for abuse are quite real, a new Legal Services Corporation should be bound down by chains of law. At the very minimum, the corporation should be federally chartered for a limited term of no more than five years, at which time Congress could review the entire operation.

The Senate bill that now prevails is a far cry from the administration's recommendation. It bears no resemblance to a House-approved version that has some faults, largely as the result of fatuous floor amendments, but has many virtues also. The Senate bill erects no more than paper barricades against the activism of super-liberal legal eagles who would be free to pursue social reform behind a camouflage of aid to the poor.

These mischievous provisions are not immediately apparent. On the surface, the Senate version seems unalarming. It is only when the bill is examined line by line, as Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina has examined it, that the shortcomings emerge.

Two examples may suffice to indicate the slippery business here afoot. The Senate bill contains a provision that could make available to legal aid attorneys "particular support functions of the Federal Government, such as the General Services Administration, the federal telecommunications system and other facilities." Helms calls this a "mind-boggling blank check," and it is. This loosely drawn authorization could equip the activist attorneys with everything from office supplies to free long distance telephone service, all at the taxpayers' expense.

The concept of equal justice remains valid. Nothing is wrong with the idea of providing legal aid to the poor. But the disappointing and deceptive bill that now heads back toward the Senate floor, which it doubtless would accomplish many good things, would constitute an invitation to legal activists to come have a ball. This is not the idea. It is not the idea at all.

RETURN OF THE SUNDAY SYMPHONY

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's total legislative-public relations strategy reportedly is now geared to defending himself from impeachment and conviction.

Sources privy to the inner councils say the White House has compiled a list of 34 to 39 hard-core conservative senators whose votes the President is counting upon to save himself from removal. All he needs are 34 votes to prevent the Senate from throwing him out of office.

The President is partly tailoring his legislative program, say our sources, to appeal to the die-hard senators. Since they are all strong conservatives, he will take a stand against certain consumer, environmental, and social programs they despise.

Already he has backed away from the Consumer Protection Agency which his consumer adviser, Virginia Knauer, has been pushing. He has also let oil-and-gas senators know that he is fighting to exempt refineries from the environmental laws and to lift the regulation of natural gas.

At the same time, the President has carefully selected friendly, conservative audiences for his public appearances. As a veteran politician, he knows the trigger lines that will evoke applause. He wants conservative senators to hear the applause their supporters are giving the President.

He is also using psychological-political warfare, say our sources, in his fight against impeachment. He knows most politicians are cautious, and some are downright timid. They would rather avoid a confrontation; they almost always prefer to work out an amicable compromise in the backrooms.

This explains the growing clamor from the leaders on Capitol Hill for him to resign. They would like him to go away quietly and, thereby, avoid a nasty impeachment fight. Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., probably the most powerful member of Congress, has even offered to introduce legislation granting Nixon immunity from prosecution if he will resign.

But the President is throwing down the gauntlet and threatening a bruising battle. Our sources say he is counting on the Capitol Hill crowd, out of normal political caution, to back off.

But the members of Congress have an even greater political urge to be re-elected. So, in the end, they probably will do what they think the voters wish.

FOOTNOTE: A White House spokesman denied that President Nixon is tailoring his legislation to impeachment, calling the charges ridiculous.

FOOD PRICES: Prices at the supermarket are continuing a steady climb. Yet the wholesale prices of many foods are dropping.

It's not too difficult to discover where the housewives' extra dollars are going.

Beef on the hoof, for example, has dropped nearly $8 per hundred weight and pork has gone down $9 since January.

Yet Missouri Beef, one of the nation's largest meat packers, has seen profits zoom a fantastic 255 per cent in the last quarter.

Merry-go-round

Nixon's strategy is to court senators

Iowa Beef, another giant, rang up a 39 per cent increase in profits, and General Host, the owner of Swift Meats, recorded a 43 per cent rise.

Nor are the supermarkets suffering. A&P, the nation's largest food chain, reported a 50-cent-per-share increase in earnings this quarter. Marcor, the owner of Jewel, watched its profits soar 61 per cent. Winn-Dixie, Giant, Lucky and Pueblo Stores are also enjoying healthy profits.

The losers are not only the consumers but the farmers. Agriculture Department sources tell us that feed grains are so high that some cattlemen are losing $150 to $200 a head.

The grain giants, of course, are doing quite well, thank you. The two largest, Cargill and Continental, don't have to report their profits because they are still privately held. But their smaller counterparts are eating high on the hog.

Cook Industries recently reported earnings of $6.86 per share, up from a mere 82 cents a year ago. The profit margin of Archer, Daniels and Midland nearly doubled. And Pillsbury, the flour titan, recorded a profit increase of 48 per cent.

In short, the processors and retailers are paying less but charging more for food, and then pocketing the difference. The prices that the shoppers pay remain high, therefore, while the prices the farmers receive are low.

The reasons aren't too difficult to figure out. Often two or three major chain stores dominate over 50 per cent of food sales in a given area. There have been charges of an unspoken "gentlemen's agreement" in some situations to keep prices and profits high.

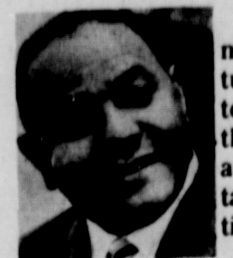

The Federal Trade Commission is investigating some of the most blatant offenders. But there is no coordinated government policy to prevent food profiteering. And unless bread lines become as long as gas lines, there probably won't be.

40 years ago

Many persons do not seem to realize that they stand at the beginning of a new order of existence. The rapidly changing prospect has changed so rapidly that the average man does not, indeed cannot, grasp its significance.

Carl Rowan Is the world wiser?

WASHINGTON — Maybe we kid ourselves into believing that out of a millennium of human tragedies we finally have learned to cast off the greeds and hatreds which have for so long threatened to blow up this overpeopled, overpolluted planet.

Perhaps we are too much a part of the turbulent river of time to be any judge of whether we have learned anything from the mistakes of dead generations.

We are so busy thrashing around for survival — for food, gasoline, "identity," social status — that we are the worst possible judges of whether we have gathered a bit of the driftwood of wisdom from the deluge of history.

And that is why we all might do well to look at ourselves and our societies through the eyes and the mind of Lt. Hiroo Onoda, who just straggled out of a Philippine jungle after three decades of waging a war he never admitted had ended.

We hear politicians boast about "a generation of peace," and we want to believe that someone has learned something about "the futility of war."

But won't Lt. Onoda be a bit shocked to learn that while he was fighting phantoms in the Philippine wilds, people who consider him a colossal dummy were fighting a Korean war, a Vietnam war, a Nigerian civil war, an India-Pakistan-Bangladesh war, a Northern Ireland Protestant-Catholic war, assorted wars between the Arabs and Israelis ...?

Was experience our best teacher, Lt. Onoda?

That hapless Japanese soldier just might remember that the attack on Pearl Harbor and Japan's role in his great war were largely inspired by Japan's feelings of economic discrimination, oppression.

Well, won't he be amazed to learn that, with the help of the hated enemy, the United States, Japan staged an economic invasion of the automotive capitals of America, the economic centers of Latin America, the whole of Southeast Asia — and thus did Japan become the third-ranking economic power in the world.

Then poor, doubly-confused Hiroo will note that they've been rioting in Indonesia cursing his emperor, accusing Japan of grievous economic imperialism. And in Detroit the cries go up, mostly from liberal union leaders, that Uncle Sam must build a moat wide enough or a wall high enough to keep out those Datsuns, Toyotas and other little cars which are the new symbols of "the yellow peril."

Speaking of yellow, even after 30 years of jungle equality, Lt. Onoda may recall that racism was rampant in the years leading up to World War II. It undergirded the colonialism that held most of Asia in Europe's grip. And only a fool would deny that racial hostility hastened conflict between Japan and the United States.

Lt. Onoda may say that people have "wised up" when someone tells him that most of Asia and Africa are now out from under the yoke of the British, the French, the Dutch.

But he'll soon learn that much of Eastern Europe is still a colony of the Soviet Union; that the United States remains guilty of grievous colonialism where the Panama Canal is concerned; that the Portuguese cling stupidly to portions of Africa, and that the colonial mentality is still the proudest possession of millions of Colonel Blimps whose hearts belong to the glorious days of empire.

Racism? They may tell old Rip Van Onoda that while he was swinging from vine to vine in the Philippines, waging his personal war, they opened up some schoolhouses and motels and movie theaters to blacks in the United States and stopped insulting Asian and African diplomats on Route 40 in Maryland — not that any diplomats travel Route 40 anymore.

But Onoda is going to be a bit disillusioned to find that for all man's new wisdom, racism has become a bigger issue in Liverpool and London; that you can still get elected President of the United States through not-so-subtle appeals to racism; that racism is now about as big and open in Boston as it used to be in Birmingham (Alabama, that is), and that "little fat Jap" is still a choice perjorative in some circles.

Onoda may dimly recall that before war swallowed him up for the better part of his life, people were saying that somehow, if man was not to destroy the human race, the gap between the haves and the have-nots had to be closed. Someone ought to tell Hiroo there was a time during his exile when "foreign aid" was a big deal — especially in the United States. But it took 15 or 20 years for the politicians to decide that "aid" didn't buy many friends or influence many people. So we're back to the old hard-nosed, dog-eat-dog world where the U.S. is snarling at the French and the Germans, both of whom are out to screw the British, all of whom are out to shaft the Japanese. And they all say to hell with the poor countries.

One really wonders if, from his unique vantage point, Lt. Onoda would conclude that we are a lot smarter than we used to be.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Take that, you dirty rotten irritating seat belt buzzer!"

Talmadge says Democrats have drifted too far to left

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The Democratic party has drifted too far to the left and should move back toward center if it is going to capture the White House in 1976, in the opinion of Georgia Democrat Herman Talmadge.

"If the national Democratic party will get back in the mainstream of American politics," Sen. Talmadge said Saturday night at the Missouri Democrats' annual Jackson Day celebration, "if the party will nominate a leader who will appeal to and work for a majority of rank and file Americans, I have no doubt we can once again assume our role of leadership."

"The Democratic Party has always held the confidence of grassroots America so long as it adhered to its founding principles," Talmadge said. "And the party has only been repudiated when it lost sight of its goals and allowed itself to become the tool of special interests and pressure groups."

"We saw that lesson in action two years ago," he said, referring to the candidacy of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D. "The folly of losing touch with a majority of the people and allowing our party to be divided along radical ideological lines became very apparent . . . if we are going to continue to have a strong and viable two-party system, we cannot afford that mistake again."

Talmadge, a member of the Senate Watergate Committee, gave only casual reference to Watergate in his talk, but said it has contributed to a "depression of the American spirit."

Earlier, in a news conference, he reminded those involved in Watergate were not elected to their positions, and called President Nixon's handling of the situation "about the most inept that I've seen."

He said he thought Congress, and not the judiciary, should decide what constitutes grounds for impeachment. He said he would not prejudice the issue and will wait to see what evidence the U.S. House comes up with. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., agreed, saying he would not comment on how he would vote until the Senate receives the impeachment resolution.

None of the Democratic speakers at Jackson Day called for President Nixon's resignation, saying they favored impeachment proceedings.

Unless there are "legal grounds," said Rep. William Hungate, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, he would not approve the impeachment resolution.

Asked to elaborate, he said there are five or six issues, ranging from Watergate, the secret bombing of Cambodia and impoundment of federal funds. What will weigh most heavily in his mind would be whether there was a pattern of disregard for the law, Hungate said.

In the news conference, Talmadge said Nixon's refusal to surrender tapes and other documents to the House committee, as he had done with the Senate Watergate Committee, is "adding fuel to the flames for impeachment."

Eagleton, asked if his experience and public exposure as the vice presidential candidate in 1972 made him politically stronger, said that will be answered in the 1976 election. However, he said, recent polls have shown him to be stronger.

Eagleton told about 700 persons at a Saturday afternoon rally that the Watergate problem can be ended by "President Nixon matching his word of cooperation with the deed of cooperation."

Eagleton, seeking re-election, said Nixon "must cease his charade of constantly talking in terms of cooperating in the investigation but consistently acting to restrict the investigation."

He said the most reprehensible events of Watergate were not the burglaries or wiretappings but the "callous flouting of the rule of law by men holding some of the highest positions of public trust in the nation — and that is not politics as usual. If anyone tries to tell you it is, they are feeding you bunk."

"High-ranking officials of the administration have condemned conspiracies at the same time they were engaging in them," Eagleton said. "And their public call for law and order went on while privately they were subverting the law and thus promoting disorder."

"John Mitchell was absolutely right. We should have been watching what they were doing, not what they were saying."

Birds said returning after dark

GRACEHAM, Md. (AP) — Maryland health officials are considering using infra-red equipment to detect how many birds remain in a pine grove here after a weekend blizzard to scare them off.

Shotguns, fireworks and amplified noise exploded around the site in an attempt to roost the millions of starlings and grackles from the 60-acre nesting place they've inhabited since last fall. Their droppings are several inches thick in places and officials fear a health hazard.

Dr. Kenneth L. Crawford, Maryland veterinarian who heads the bird chasing project, claimed 90 per cent success after the weekend campaign. "Each night fewer birds return," he said Sunday.

But some Graceham residents claim the birds wait until after dark, when the noise has stopped, to return to their roosts.

"The birds are getting in there late at night," said Lester Sovocool, the ambulance chief in the tiny western Maryland town. "I know because I see 'em coming out in the morning."

Health department spokesman John McAviney said efforts are being made to get infra-red equipment to search out the pines at night and get an accurate count of the number of birds remaining. The procedure, used in Vietnam to search out enemy snipers, finds targets by zeroing in on their body heat.

Meanwhile, fresh explosive attacks were planned for Monday and Tuesday nights.

Health department spokesman John McAviney said efforts are being made to get infra-red equipment to search out the pines at night and get an accurate count of the number of birds remaining. The procedure, used in Vietnam to search out enemy snipers, finds targets by zeroing in on their body heat.

Meanwhile, fresh explosive attacks were planned for Monday and Tuesday nights.

The birds are getting in there late at night, said Lester Sovocool, the ambulance chief in the tiny western Maryland town. "I know because I see 'em coming out in the morning."

Health department spokesman John McAviney said efforts are being made to get infra-red equipment to search out the pines at night and get an accurate count of the number of birds remaining. The procedure, used in Vietnam to search out enemy snipers, finds targets by zeroing in on their body heat.

Frogs legs hopping off menus

PARIS (AP) — "O to be a frog, my lads, and live aloof from care." — Theocritus, 3rd Century B.C.

Bad news from the bulrushes: A world crisis in frog production that croaked the business in France is now edging eastward from Koplik to Babadag to Al Fayyoun.

Blame it all on pollution and cuisines de grenouilles proven- ciale.

The Greeks like Theocritus who envied the easy life in the bog never knew about pesticides, insecticides or buses full of tourists who rank frogs' legs on their doing-France list just after the Eiffel Tower and Place Pigalle.

The demand keeps going up — 400 million frogs were eaten in France last year — but the importers, who provide the figures, say they have to hunt farther and farther away to get them. Thus the frog push eastward and through ponds in Albania (Koplik), Romania (Babadag) and Egypt (Al Fayyoun).

Unlike last year's Swiss cheese shortage in which it was whispered that a possible way out lay in making the holes larger, there is no interest in breeding up the species because fat frog thighs mean toughness under tooth.

But the frog scarcity in Europe is a genuinely ugly squiggle on a global graph of ecological atrocities. France now accounts for only one or two per cent of the frogs it consumes. Over a 20-year period, the ponds in Burgundy and the swamps in the Vendee region of western France have become so fouled with chemicals that neither the frogs nor the insects they live on can survive. And attempts to raise frogs industrially here have proven impossibly expensive.

Raymond Arbona, a director of Codagro, the biggest French frog importing group, said that the same process was taking place outside France.

Asked if in a pinch he would ever consider importing big American bullfrogs, Arbona replied coolly: "For my clients that would be like eating horse meat after the heart of the fillet."

New automobile devices merely flashes from past

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Rotary engines, smog devices, shock-absorbing bumpers.

To some they are ingenious new inventions from Detroit. But to the operators of the world's largest private automobile collection here, they are merely flashes from the past.

"There's nothing new in cars," says Jim Edwards, a spokesman for Harrah's automobile collection. "Nothing's really changed in the last 60 years."

"When the automobile was first coming out the scene, there were hundreds of auto makers, and many of them had some pretty ingenious ideas."

One of those ideas was the rotary engine which was first introduced by the Adams-Farwell in 1906. In addition, the Adams offered a removable steering wheel and control pedals to convert the car from a two-seat coupe to a single-seat roadster.

And smog? Detroit said it had made great progress in reducing pollution when it put double burners on engine exhaust systems a few years ago.

The double burner returns exhaust to the engine for a second burning, exactly as in the 1906 Compound which also offered power brakes for good measure.

In 1903 the Knox offered an air-cooled engine. The White Model H touring car offered shock absorbing bumpers in 1907. The Thomas Model 35 offered seat belts in 1907.

The list goes on. The nation's auto makers have made many pilgrimages to the auto collection here.

"They all come to look at our cars," said Edwards "but when they come we just ignore them and let them browse. We don't know what they're looking for, and we can't say what they find here."

Slaying victims are identified by authorities

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Police have identified a man and a woman found shot to death here Saturday as Benjamin Jones, 45, and Mrs. Dorothy Wolfe, 50.

Officers said they were scheduled to appear last Thursday before a federal grand jury investigating the March 8 hold-up of the Broadway National Bank.

The exact time of death could not be fixed, but officers said it was believed to have been Wednesday or early Thursday. Both bodies were in an advanced stage of decomposition.

Man reports beating, abduction

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — John Strick Jr., 53, an official of the Urban Renewal Agency in Kansas City, Kan., was beaten, stabbed and apparently left for dead here early Sunday.

Police said Strick told them his ordeal began Saturday night on the parking lot at Providence Hospital in Kansas City, Kan. Strick had gone to the hospital to visit his father. He said three men grabbed him, demanded his money and the keys to his car. He said they beat him, held him forcibly in the rear seat of the car and drove away.

Officers said Strick indicated they stopped the car and beat him again in Kansas City, Kan., then forced him in the trunk of the car and drove away.

After driving for nearly an hour the car stopped, Strick related, and he was removed from the trunk. Again they demanded money from him, then beat him and began attacking him with a knife. He suffered multiple stab wounds in the neck and chest.

His assailants apparently left him for dead, but Strick was found about 2 a.m. crawling for help in a residential area of St. Joseph. He is reported in critical condition.

Contaminated chicken flocks to be destroyed

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Leaders of Mississippi's broiler industry say that the millions of contaminated chickens which the federal government has ordered destroyed are still alive and none has reached consumers.

They promised their cooperation in destroying the contaminated birds.

The government has estimated that 22 million chickens are involved, but the industry says the total is below eight million.

At a meeting Sunday in Jackson, the broiler industry leaders said that they have found and stopped the source of the contamination. They said extensive federal and industry testing was under way on all chicken flocks in the state.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency refused Saturday to allow the marketing of chickens of three poultry raisers after extensive testing showed birds from their flocks contained unacceptable levels of the pesticide dieldrin. Dieldrin is known to cause cancer on prolonged exposure.

T.H. Etheridge, chairman of the board of the National Broilers Association, said the source of the contamination was pinpointed as an ingredient in chicken feed.

He said the dieldrin was found in the blended fat — a mixture of vegetable and animal oils — purchased from a "common source" by two of the affected poultry firms.

Poultry-raiser H.F. McCarty said that once the problem was found, all affected chickens were placed on "clean feed" and the birds involved were isolated.

Industry representatives said they could not estimate an over-all dollar loss.

McCarty said his loss, not including time and potential market profits, would be about $2 million. Officials of Morton Broilers said they faced similar losses.

Seminex officials plan to contact church leaders

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Officials from Seminex, the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod seminary in exile, said Sunday they hoped to explain to church leaders why second-year students rejected part of the resolution from the council of presidents last week to place them in vicarious positions.

The officials plan to contact district presidents of the Synod this week to gate feeling on the rejection, the latest development in the two-month dispute between seminex students and church leaders.

The students walked out of Concordia Lutheran Seminary in February following the firing of its president, Dr. John Tietjen, saying they would establish their own seminary.

The second-year students said Friday they rejected a portion of the Council of Presidents' resolution calling for placement supervision by the Missouri Synod Board for Higher Education. The students said they want placement handled by seminex officials.

Seminex placement coordinators are reportedly laying the groundwork for placing fourth-year students into the ministry. District presidents will take that issue up when they convene April 29 in St. Louis.

Gallup Poll indicates Reagan top GOP choice

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — California Gov. Ronald Reagan is the top choice of Republican county chairmen for the party's 1976 presidential nomination, according to the latest Gallup Poll.

In a mail survey of 3,725 county chairmen, 39 per cent of the 2,384 who responded chose Reagan.

Vice President Gerald Ford had 24 per cent of their votes; former Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York had 12 per cent; and former Treasury Secretary John Connally, 7 per cent.

Over the past 20 years, the views of the GOP county chairmen have prevailed in national conventions, except in 1952 when they favored Ohio Sen. Robert Taft over Dwight Eisenhower by 2-1.

Reagan also has wide support from GOP rank-and-file members. Last April, Reagan was second only to then Vice President Spiro T. Agnew. By October regular GOP members picked Reagan as their top choice.

Ford's backers were asked to list a second choice for the nomination if the vice president refused to run for the presidency. Two-thirds of those who selected Ford swung to Reagan, giving him a 55 per cent rating. Without Ford in the race, Rockefeller's support rose to 15 per cent, while Connally rated 12 per cent.

In questionnaires mailed in late January and early February, the county chairmen were asked: "As of today, which one of these men do you personally prefer as the Republican candidate for president in 1976?"

The responses and percentages were: Ronald Reagan, 39; Gerald Ford, 24; Nelson Rockefeller, 12; John Connally, 7; Barry Goldwater, 6; Elliot Richardson, 4; Charles Percy, 3; and Howard Baker, 2.

Korean war armistice replacement proposed

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — North Korea today proposed to the United States that a peace agreement replace the military armistice that ended the Korean war in 1953 and that all American forces be withdrawn from South Korea.

The North Korean news agency reported that the request was made in a letter to the U.S. Congress by the fifth Supreme People's Assembly in Pyongyang after a proposal by Foreign Minister Ho Dam.

The letter said the military armistice signed July 27, 1953, has become outdated and "cannot guarantee a durable peace."

The proposal stressed that the agreement be reached with the United States, not with South Korea, because "it is right and proper to settle the question between the parties concerned which hold real power to guarantee it with certainty."

The letter listed four points to be included in a peace agreement:

1. Both sides would remove "all danger of direct armed conflict" and the United States would pledge not to "instigate the South Korean authorities to the war provocation maneuvers and fascist repression of the

The paper maintains that indiscriminate hunting by humans has reduced the number of antelopes and other animals that tigers usually prey upon.

NCAA finals

N.C. State, Marquette square off for crown

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Norman Sloan of North Carolina State and Al McGuire of Marquette, two basketball coaches who believe strongly in love, were down to the final game of the season tonight as their teams met for the NCAA championship.

"This team is made up of men who truly love one another—that's why it has been a winner," said Sloan, 47-year-old Indiana native who played in the backcourt at N.C. State 25 years ago under legendary Everett Case.

Sloan said the family feeling generated by his players toward each other and their coaches has made them a team.

David Thompson, Monte Towe, Tim Stoddard and Mark Moeller were key sophomores last year and are in their second year of play with current seniors Tom Burleson and Steve Nuce.

Sloan conceded it took while before junior college transfers Moe Rivers and Phil Spence, new to the squad this season, fit in comfortably as members of the family.

McGuire said before Marquette began its season, "It's definitely going to depend upon if the players really love each other or just make believe and have their love affairs with the semi agents who tout them and blow their heads out of proportion."

The N.C. State Wolfpack, No. 1 in the nation and 29-1 on the season with a 27-game winning streak, is averaging 92 points a game.

Marquette, ranked No. 3 on a 26-4 record, traditionally has been a defensive leader under McGuire, who regards his swarming defense as part of his offense.

His warriors are 104-11 for their last four seasons. In those 115 games they have yielded more than 75 points only 11 times, twice in overtime games.

The Wolfpack recovered from an 11-point deficit to end UCLA's bid for an eighth straight NCAA title with an 80-77 double overtime victory over the Bruins as Thompson led the way with 28 points. Incidentally, State wiped out a seven-point UCLA lead in the second extra period.

Marquette, trailing 24-23 at halftime, rallied to clip Big Eight champion Kansas 64-51 as Maurice Lucas scored 18 points.

The N.C. State-Marquette game, set for 9:10 p.m., EDT, will be televised nationally by NBC. It will follow a 6:35 p.m. third place game between Kansas and UCLA.

Kansas Coach Ted Owens says his Jayhawks are eager for the chance to show they are better than they appeared against Marquette.

UCLA Coach John Wooden is frank to admit neither he nor his team likes consolation games. He said his policy is to give most of the playing time to players who have not seen as much service over the year and let his seniors determine whether they want to play.

Wooden said one senior indicated he might not play. Wooden would not identify him, but hinted that it was 6-foot-11 Bill Walton, three-time All-American.

Purdue nips Utah for NIT championship

NEW YORK (AP)—"We suddenly came all unglued," said Coach Bill Foster Sunday after Purdue had defeated his Utah team 87-81 to win the National Invitation Tournament.

"It seems like all of a sudden for about eight minutes of the second half we got careless and didn't seem to be able to grab a rebound."

While Utah was mired in mistakes and foul trouble, it was Purdue's bench strength which was providing game-winning opportunities.

"We've had a strong bench all year," said Purdue Coach Fred Schaus after Sunday's victory. "But when Jerry Nichols got hurt in the Hawaii game, I started to get worried about the flexibility of our bench, and being able to substitute freely."

"I guess I needn't have worried."

Boston College won the consolation game from Jacksonville 87-77 as Mark Raterink and Will Morrison each scored 24 points.

Both teams had crises which tested their benches. Tyrone Medley, the Utes' second-leading scorer going into final game, fouled out with 13:01 remaining in the game after tallying only six points, while Chas Menatti, their starting forward, got four fouls late in the first half, and spent the early part of the second half on the bench.

Hector Cruz produces, but Cards farm him out

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Jose and Hector Cruz must be wondering what you have to do to stick with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jose, a 26-year-old outfielder who lost the starting job in center for the Cards this spring, smacked a double and drove in three runs Sunday as St. Louis bounced the Cincinnati Reds, 5-2, for their ninth exhibition win against five losses.

But at least Jose is still on the Cardinals' roster. Younger brother Hector, a 20-year-old rookie, is not. He was one of those sent across town Sunday to the Cards' minor league complex as they trimmed their roster to 31 players.

And all he did to deserve that was smack his third home run of the grapefruit season in the seventh to nail the lid on the St. Louis win.

Others cut in the first squad reduction by the Cards were pitchers Tony Gonzalez, John Denny and Dan Larsen, catcher Marc Hill, first baseman Ed Kurpiel, and outfielders Larry Herndon and Jerry Humphrey.

The Cards announced they also returned outfielder-first baseman Jay Johnstone to the Oakland Athletics. Johnstone had been purchased conditionally by St. Louis two months ago.

No. 4 at Atlanta

Cale Yarborough holds up four fingers to indicate his fourth win at the Atlanta International Raceway at Sunday's Atlanta 500. Yarborough, in a Chevrolet, caught David Pearson with just over 100 miles to go to win the NASCAR Grand National event. He picked up $15,950 in prize money. (UPI)

Cale Yarborough claims second straight checker

ATLANTA (AP)—"About the only thing I could do," said Cale Yarborough, "was draw a bead on him and keep him in my sights."

Yarborough was speaking Sunday of the masterful job he did in chasing down front-running David Pearson to win the 15th Atlanta 500 Stock Car Race and a check for $15,950.

The stocky, blond Yarborough hunts coons in the winter, quail on his farm in South Carolina in the spring and frequently displays his shooting talents in outdoor films.

He also is a determined, aggressive race driver, and he had Pearson in his sights from the start of the 450 miles, $113,000 race and never let up. His persistence finally paid off.

With 84 circuits of the 1½-mile Atlanta International Raceway remaining, the Chevrolet-driving winner zipped by as Pearson sat in his pit and went unchallenged the rest of the way.

"It was simply a case of hanging in against a driver you know has the fastest car," Yarborough said. "There's an old saying that the race is never won until the last lap is completed. That's the way we played it."

Pearson, who had started his mini-engined Mercury in the front row pole position, had led the race five times for a total of 172 laps before he made what he planned to be his key, late-race stop.

Holding a narrow lead of less than five seconds over the dogged Yarborough, Pearson dashed into his pit for a change of all four tires, using 30.6 seconds. After that, there was to be only a brief stop for fuel in the final 50 miles.

Yarborough went by him at high speed, and as expected, put Pearson a full lap down. That deficit, of course, would be made up when Yarborough had to make his final major stop later.

But luck broke for Yarborough. Five laps after Pearson's stop, a spinning car brought out the day's third and final yellow light situation and Yarborough was able to make his pit stop. Under the rules, Pearson could not improve his position during the slowdown and though he got back in the same lap he never could close on Yarborough.

The final margin was 21.6 seconds and Yarborough admitted he needed every bit of it.

"I really didn't outrun anybody," he said. "I just got the breaks. Had I been forced to pit under the green flag, I'd still be chasing him."

Yarborough's car, owned by ex-driver Junior Johnson, was equipped with a massive 427 cubic inch engine. Pearson's car mounted one that rated only 351 cubic inch displacement.

Yarborough posted a race speed of 136.510 miles per hour, completing the nationally-televised feature in 3 hours, 17 minutes and 26 seconds. It was his second triumph in a row and his third of the season.

Foreman's trainer faces fine

Heavyweight fight hits snag over referee

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A hassle over the referee threw the George Foreman-Ken Norton heavyweight title fight into a boiling stew of Latin tempers, threats and mad confusion today.

Nobody doubted, however, that the 15-round bout would go on as scheduled in the new Poliedro here Tuesday at 10:30 p.m. EDT.

Dick Sadler, Foreman's fiery little trainer, showed up at a scheduled rules meeting Sunday and, before the first bell was rung, stalked out.

An executive of the World Boxing Association said Sadler would be fined. Another official threatened to vacate Foreman's title. Sadler marshalled a hurried press conference and called for the destruction of the present contract and the writing of another.

"We agreed to a world championship fight which would have the approval of the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council," Sadler said. "If this can't be done, then we will strike out the word 'world' and fight for the championship of Caracas."

The squabble arose over wording of the contract and proper jurisdiction, but it centered principally on the identity of the judges and the referee.

Sadler is reported anxious to have an American, Jimmy Ronda, of Seattle, as the third man in the ring. The Venezuelan Boxing Commission insists that this is its private prerogative. It wants to designate a set of purely Venezuelan officials.

"We will set the rules and name the officials," said Alberto Marquez, the national commissioner.

Sadler argued that this was against his agreement which he said specified that jurisdiction would be in the hands of the Venezuelans but all rules would have to be approved by the two world governing bodies, WBA and WBC.

The WBA, through Dr. Elias Cordova of Panama, backed the Venezuelan commission, which is a WBA affiliate. But Raymond Velasquez, head of the rival WBC, balked.

"Each of the three bodies — the WBA, WBC and the commission — should pick one official," he said, supporting the Foreman camp. The WBA and the Venezuelans ganged up in opposition.

The dispute spilled over into the various hotel lobbies, canceling a scheduled workout by Foreman, and nothing was immediately settled. But most observers expected some sort of a compromise prior to today's official weigh-in at noon.

Meanwhile, Foreman relaxed around the swimming pool of his hotel, built on one of Caracas' many hills, and the challenger Norton went to the mountains to meditate. He stopped hard workouts the middle of last week.

Norton, who broke Muhammad Ali's jaw in winning a first fight before dropping a second, is steamed over reports that Foreman and Ali already have agreed to a September bout.

Henry Schwartz, executive vice president of Video Techniques, said he is ready to stage the multi-million dollar spectacular in Kinshasa, Zaire — formerly Leopoldville in the Belgian Congo — with each participant guaranteed $5 million.

LA Lakers clinch NBA Pacific title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Lakers' Coach Bill Sharman voiced his feelings about his team Sunday night after his players bombed the Buffalo Braves 150-124 and clinched the National Basketball Association's Pacific Division title.

"I consider this a remarkable achievement by the players because of the injuries and the makeshift lineup we used all year," Sharman said.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Boston Celtics trimmed the Houston Rockets 109-106 in overtime; the Capital Bullets crushed the Atlanta Hawks 120-92; the Cleveland Cavaliers surprised the New York Knicks 114-92; the Phoenix Suns dropped the Golden State Warriors 134-121; the Milwaukee Bucks downed the Portland Trail Blazers 120-110; and the Chicago Bulls topped the Seattle SuperSonics 122-113.

Sharman had taken a team with a new center, Elmore Smith, extensive injuries to Jerry West, Bill Bridges and Happy Hairston, and forged the cohesiveness that led to clinching first place Sunday night.

Smith scored 37 points Sunday night in the rout of his former teammates. Gail Goodrich, the only Laker regular not to be hampered by injuries this season, added 35. Braves center Bob McAdoo had 40 points.

Celtics 109, Rockets 106, overtime

Jo Jo White scored six of his 35 points in the extra period to give Boston their victory over Houston.

Bullets 120, Hawks 92
Guards Kevin Porter and Phil Chenier combined for 50 points to help Capital break open a tight game.

Cavaliers 114, Knicks 92
Len Wilkens scored 22 points and keyed a fourth-quarter surge that helped Cleveland pull away from New York and cruise to victory.

Suns 134, Warriors 121
Keith Erickson scored 40 points and the Suns eliminated the Warriors despite 46 points by Cazzie Russell.

Bucks 120, Trail Blazers 110
Milwaukee clinched a tie for the best won-lost record in the NBA this season behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 43 points and 26 by Bob Dandridge.

Bulls 122, SuperSonics 113
Norm Van Lier scored 13 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter, including key baskets that gave Chicago a 114-109 lead.

In the NBA Saturday night, it was Boston 108, Houston 105; Kansas City-Omaha 107, New York 106; Atlanta 119, Capital 108, overtime; Philadelphia 97, Detroit 89, and Seattle 139, Golden State 137.

American Basketball Association results Sunday: Indiana Pacers 101, Utah Stars 89; Kentucky Colonels 122, San Diego Conquistadors 111; New York Nets 99, San Antonio Spurs 97; Memphis Tams 104, Virginia Squires 94, and Denver Rockets 109, Carolina Cougars 107.

In the ABA Saturday, it was New York 112, Denver 100; Kentucky 101, Carolina 97; Memphis 106, Utah 101, and Virginia 109, San Diego 101.

Royals' bats ring in 7-2 victory

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The Royals' batting order had big second and sixth innings and Steve Busby turned in six strong innings on the mound Sunday against Detroit, spelling a 7-2 victory for Kansas City in exhibition baseball.

Mickey Lolich surrendered seven of the Royals' 10 hits, including a solo homer by the 16-year veteran Vada Pinson in the sixth.

"There was what you might call a gale helping it along, but it won't say that in the box score," kidded the much-traveled Pinson.

Twins' strength is in its hitting

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Manager Frank Quilici thinks the youth program of the Minnesota Twins is ready to begin paying dividends in the West Division of the American League.

The Twins are coming off a third-place finish in 1973, with uncertainties regarding Harmon Killebrew and Tony Oliva, but with confidence of more experience.

"We had a very young team last season," said Quilici. "Our players had to learn to play together while they were finding out if they belonged in the major leagues."

"You could see the change in our club last season. It wasn't the team in September that it was in April... it was a lot better."

Among the youngsters Quilici is counting on are Eric Soderholm, centerfielder Steve Brye, catcher Glenn Borgmann and a group of young pitchers, including Joe Decker, 10-10, and Bill Campbell, 3-3.

However, to become a contender again, the Twins need the power of Killebrew and Oliva. Killebrew, recovering from knee surgery, dislocated a shoulder in spring training and his comeback is in jeopardy.

Oliva missed most of the 1972 season with knee miseries, but came back in 1973 with a .291 average as the team's designated hitter. His gimp knees restrict his movement on the bases when he does get on.

Minnesota's strength is its hitting. Rod Carew won his third American League batting championship last year with a .350 average. With others such as Jim Holt's .297, Oliva's .291 and Steve Braun's .283, the Twins led the majors in hitting.

Quilici would like his hitters this year to cut firmly in place—until the late stages of the championship game against Chipola of Marianna, Fla.

Coming into the tournament with a 29-2 record, the New Jersey team, which won the championship last year here, swept aside Niagara County of Sanborn, N.Y., 80-58; Grand View of Des Moines, Iowa, 83-48; and Northeastern Oklahoma A&M 64-51.

In the finals on Saturday night, it looked like more of the same. Chipola-Marianna was trailing 44-34 with 13 minutes, 45 seconds left.

However, the outside shooting of Albert Gardner and Albert Culver came into play against the Mercer County zone defense and, with 5:12 left, it was suddenly tied, 50-50. The Florida team could do no better than tie it—the last time at 56-56—and it was Gardner's misfortune to miss a shot from the corner that well could have sent it into overtime.

The title game ended 60-58. Gardner, the best of the second-place team with 20 points, was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Moberly, Mo., took third place with an 81-62 victory over Northeastern Oklahoma A&M; Vincennes, Ind., finished fourth by beating Grand View, 95-86; and Hill Junior College of Hillsboro was fifth with its 94-89 victory over San Jacinto, Pasadena, Tex.

It was a victory over the Canadians that clinched the East Division title for the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, and it was a Montreal native that led the way.

"Beating them is a terrific feeling, especially for me," rookie Dave Forbes said in the dressing room after the Bruins stopped Montreal 6-3 Sunday night at Boston Garden. "But we still have the playoffs ahead."

Forbes notched the first Boston goal that sparked a four-goal eruption in the second period, giving Boston a 4-2 lead. It was his pass to Greg Shepard that set up the fourth goal, which proved to be the game winner.

The loss dropped Montreal into a tie for second place with the New York Rangers, who beat Buffalo 5-3.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Philadelphia trimmed St. Louis 4-1, Chicago blanked Minnesota 6-0, the New York Islanders surprised Atlanta 6-4, Pittsburgh buried Detroit 8-0, Vancouver edged Toronto 3-2, and Los Angeles whipped California 7-1.

Flyers 4, Blues 1
Goals by Orest Kindrachuk, Rick McLeish, Andre Dupont and Phil Clement enabled Philadelphia to virtually clinch first place in the West.

Rangers 5, Sabres 3
Rod Gilbert scored a pair of power-play goals 2 1/2 minutes apart in the third period for New York to raise his career total to 300, making him the first Ranger ever to reach that plateau.

Hawks 6, Stars 0
Chicago rookie goalie Mike Veisor turned in his first NHL shutout, stopping 33 shots.

Islanders 6, Flames 4
Recently acquired center Doug Rombough scored twice for New York.

Penguins 8, Wings 0
Bob Kelly recorded the first three-goal hat trick of his NHL career and goalie Andy Brown turned in his first shutout for Pittsburgh.

Canucks 3, Leafs 2
Gerry O'Flaherty, Andre Boudrias and Bobby Lalonde scored the Vancouver goals, all in the second period.

Kings 7, Seals 1
Linemates Butch Goring, Bob Nevin and Mike Corrigan all scored in the second period as the Kings ran their unbeaten string to 11 games.

Saturday's NHL results: Montreal 7, St. Louis 3; Detroit 5, Rangers 3; Buffalo 1, Islanders 1, tie; Atlanta 4, Boston 3;

Jim: "How about some articles to show how bridge has changed in the last 40 years?"
Oswald: "The Culbertson-Sims match of 1935 might be worth using as an example. Of course, expert 1935 bidding was a trifle better than that of Ely and Jo Culbertson and a lot better than that of Hal and Dorothy Sims. Dorothy had never learned any discipline in bidding and both teams used honor tricks rather than point count for hand evaluation."
Jim: "Here's a hand where Dorothy's lack of discipline paid off. Her club opening was one of those gulfic bids. She had some cards but well below opening strength."

"Oswald: 'Ely's two club bid was a game force in the Culbertson system. Hal doubled and Jo Culbertson went to two hearts. Dorothy doubled that on the theory that Jo had bid her best suit.'
Jim: 'I see that Ely jumped to four diamonds and Jo passed. How do you explain that even in 1935 bidding?'
Oswald: 'Ely blamed Jo but I blame Ely. If he had just bid three diamonds Jo would have recognized the continuing force and bid. However, when he jumped to four Jo decided that there was something wrong with the whole thing and passed. For the record, Ely made six.'"

State government leaders react to campaign reform measure

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A strong campaign finance reform measure tentatively approved by Watergate wary members of the Missouri House last week has drawn cheers and a few jeers from state government leaders.

It is expected to be finally approved and sent to the Senate this week.

The measure, a product of compromise between Republicans who generally favored strict limitations on spending, and Democrats who were inclined toward a less restrictive bill with complete disclosure, gained first-round approval after 26 amendment attempts.

Fifteen amendments were successful and a number provide significant change from the original proposal by Rep. Kenneth Rothman, D-Clayton, the House majority leader. The measure was supported by Rothman and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis.

Among major changes approved by the House was establishment of a bi-partisan commission to enforce the measure's provisions.

The Democratic leadership favored allowing the secretary of state to enforce reporting requirements. In its current form the bill would require filing contributions and expenses with the secretary of state, but would provide enforcement authority to the bi-partisan commission appointed by the governor with Senate consent from a list of nominees submitted by the Supreme Court.

Reports would be required to be filed 30 and seven days before and 30 days after an election.

Proponents of that provision said it was necessary to let the people know how candidates had spent their money and who had contributed.

Eliminated from the bill was a check-off system under which Missouri taxpayers could designate $1 on income tax forms. That provision was favored by state Treasurer James Spainhower and many other Democrats.

All candidates spending more than $500 in a campaign would be covered by the reporting provisions of the bill.

Contributions of $25 or more would have to be reported, listing the donor's name and address. Contributions of under $25 would have to be reported in total, but would not have to be listed with the donor.

Spending limitations in the bill were criticized by Gov. Bond as being unrealistic. He thinks a limitation of $287,000 for a statewide race should be raised. The $287,000 figure is Bond's estimate of the limit.

The bill limits statewide candidates to expenditures of $625 per 100 residents of the state or $12.50 per 100 voters in the last presidential election. Other candidates could spend $12.50 for each 100 residents or $25 for each 100 voters.

House Speaker Rabbitt disagrees with the governor.

"What we wanted to accomplish," he said, "was a limitation on expenses that would allow someone to run (for statewide office) without being a millionaire."

He cited a number of wealthy candidates including Bond and Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth who have been successful in politics.

Rabbitt disagreed with an assertion by Charles Valier, the governor's assistant, that the restriction on expenses would favor incumbents.

Valier said as a result of the office he holds, an incumbent candidate for statewide office, especially governor, would hold a marked advantage over challengers because of extensive media exposure.

"It works both ways," Rabbitt contended. He said the occupant of the governor's office is sure to receive criticism in the media and that criticism would have an effect on voters.

He said he hoped the limitation would lead to television providing "more public affairs programs and less purchased Madison Avenue type advertising."

Rabbitt supported the concept of allowing banks, corporations and labor unions contribute to campaigns.

"We feel," he said, "that as long as people know where the money is coming from, they can make a decision accordingly."

Rabbitt said he had supported campaign reform for a number of years and was generally pleased with the form of the bill.

However, he cited some provisions as possibly being "too restrictive."

Among them is a limitation of $25 for anonymous contributions. He said such a restriction might limit the small contributor and result in greater reliance upon large donations.

Critics of that exemption have said candidates could receive thousands of contributions of $24 each and not be required to report names and addresses of contributors.

Republican Floor Leader Robert Snyder of Kirkwood proposed an amendment to the bill which would have limited non-disclosure of names and addresses of contributors of $5 or less. He withdrew the amendment when it appeared that many Democrats would not support it, and substituted the $25 figure. Rothman's bill originally called for a $100 upper limit.

Snyder, who led a floor attempt by Republicans to amend the Rothman measure, said he had reservations about allowing corporations, banks and labor unions contribute to campaigns.

He said it was opening up an avenue for big money because corporations are not allowed now under state law to contribute.

Snyder said the argument that such contributions would be made, whether prohibited or not, was a specious one. Prohibiting the contributions, he said, would make the procedure "cumbersome and burdensome," and would have the effect of limiting them even if they were not completely eliminated.

The allowance of such contributions is widely different from current law, which allows contributions from voluntary committees using only their own money.

Under another provision of the bill, reporting by political committees has been significantly strengthened. A candidate must now designate an official committee and all expenses and contributions to subsidiary committees must be funneled through the main one.

Centralized filing of expense reports by committees is another marked departure from current law. Committees may now file reports in the county where they are formed and in some instances out-of-state committees have filed reports in the state where they were functioning.

Penalty provisions of the bill have drawn some criticism as not being strong enough. Violations could result in a fine of up to $1,000 or a one-year jail sentence or both.

However, courts could order an office vacated and a special election called by the governor if violations are found by the commission and prosecuted in the courts. If the violation is found before the election, the courts could order a candidate's name removed from the ballot.

Rothman has said forfeiture of office for a politician "is equivalent to the death penalty."

Opposition to some provisions of the bill may be strong in the Senate.

Snyder said he hoped no substantive changes would be made but understands the Senate had a substitute measure ready for consideration even before first-round approval was gained for the House measure.

Rabbitt said if the Senate makes substantial changes, he will appoint "a strong House conference committee" to attempt to hold the line on any attempt to weaken the bill.

Renewed effort

The USSR recently renewed its efforts to successfully mine Cuba's nickel deposits by sending new equipment and additional mining specialists to the island. Cuba possesses the largest nickel fields in the world, but has been unable to increase productivity due to the high cost of mining the low grade ore. Starting with a factory at Nicaro, shown here, a modernization program has begun. If successful, it will set an example for other factories.

Possible races in state government visible during Jackson Day weekend

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — House Speaker Richard Rabbitt for lieutenant governor, Hannibal legislator Harold Volkmer for attorney general?

Former St. Louis Mayor A. J. Cervantes, former Rep. Jack Schramm and state Sen. William Cason of Clinton squaring off in the governor's race?

These are some of the possibilities presented during the Democrats' annual Jackson Day weekend.

All of those men were highly visible.

All had hospitality rooms. Cason gave out ice cream and pie at a rally for Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo. Rabbitt gave out apples and peanuts. The others stuck to the more traditional food and drink of campaign conventions.

All, with the exception of Cason, admit they are interested in the mentioned offices. Cason says he's concentrating on the legislature for the time being.

Rabbitt and Volkmer, Democratic strong spots in the Missouri House, first must run for re-election this fall to the legislature.

Volkmer, while saying he is interested in the attorney general's race, said it was not the main reason he hosted a hospitality suite.

Rabbitt, 38-year-old father of five finishing his first term as House Speaker, said he was "seriously considering" running for lieutenant governor.

Rabbitt was visibly hurt when U.S. Rep. Martha Griffiths of Michigan, a Missouri native who sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment in Congress, mentioned his name while criticizing Missouri for failing to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

She pleaded for Missouri to be "at least the 38th (and last) state to ratify."

The Missouri House defeated the ERA last year and a Senate committee killed it. This year, Rabbitt said, it would have a better chance to pass the House if it passed the Senate first. It is on the Senate calendar.

Rabbitt didn't know whether Mrs. Griffiths singled him out because she thought he wasn't doing enough for the ERA or whether she was just seeking his support and neglected to name Cason, the Senate leader.

Both Cason and Rabbitt support the ERA.

Campaigning hard in Springfield were the three candidates for the Democratic nomination for auditor: Dwight Fine of Jefferson City, George Lehr of Kansas City and Courtney Goodman of St. Louis County.

Eagleton, running for re-election, was treated more like a visiting dignitary than as a candidate.

In one of the few references to Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth's decision not to challenge Eagleton for the Senate, Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick said "the Republicans are having trouble finding someone with enough of a suicide wish to run against him."

Four candidates in the Springfield area have emerged to challenge Missouri's lone Republican congressman, Gene Taylor, and they were on hand in Springfield.

They are Greene County Magistrate Richard Franks, whose slogan on numerous balloons was "Here Comes the Judge," Ed Bonitt and James W. Roberts of Joplin and J.D. Macy, Monett cattleman.

Nearly all the state's top Democrats were there, with the exceptions of former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who sent a poem for Eagleton to read at the banquet, and Sen. Stuart Symington, who stayed in Washington because of the flu. The Hearnes' poem was a nostalgic comment about the tradition of Jackson Day.

Congressman William Hungate brought some Will Rogers' style humor to Jackson Day Friday night.

Asked if he agreed with Sen. James Symington's letter to President Nixon suggesting that top Republicans examine evidence and decide whether the President ought to give it to the House Judiciary Committee — of which Hungate is a member — Hungate said:

"I didn't write no letter to the President. We ain't that close."

Although Democrats at Jackson Day didn't think Danforth could beat Eagleton, many were relieved that Danforth didn't run because it would make Eagleton's race less expensive. The extra money now can be put into the campaign to unseat Republican state Auditor John Ashcroft. On the other hand, Danforth's staying out of the race, other Democrats said, will mean the GOP will have more money to help Ashcroft.

Watergate was mentioned frequently, but was less of a joke than in last year's Jackson Day. Democratic leaders are worrying about a severe voter backlash against all politicians, including Democrats.

Mrs. Griffiths said "there's never been a better year for women in politics."

Why?

"There are no women in Watergate," she said. Then someone mentioned Rose Mary Woods, the President's secretary.

One of the young Democrats receiving an award for the St. Charles County YD Club brought down the House when he said:

"Let me make this perfectly clear — I had a speech prepared for this occasion but my secretary cut 18 minutes out of it."

Return to the blimp?

Aerospace physicist and engineer Dewey Havill, who works in a NASA "think tank," thinks the time is right for a return to the airship, the giant gasbag most people wrote off decades ago. This small model depicts one of the designs Havill has in mind. He envisions a craft some 200-feet-long, using steam to heat its airbag, and being able to travel at speeds of 100-200 miles per hour. The aircraft could be used to carry cargo, commuters and fight forest fires.

O'Neill in prediction on impeachment vote

KANSAS CITY (AP) — If it appears the House has enough votes to impeach President Nixon, the President will resign, predicts House Majority Leader Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill.

"This would come somewhere after the time the Judiciary Committee turns over its evidence to the House and before a final vote on impeachment," the Massachusetts Democrat said here Sunday at a meeting of the 6th District Congressional Club of Missouri.

As for garnering those votes, O'Neill further predicted that if the Judiciary Committee recommends Nixon be impeached, "then the House will vote overwhelmingly for impeachment."

"If it recommends against impeachment, not more than 125 members would vote for it."

A Majority vote of the 435 House members is necessary to impeach the President. A House vote to impeach would refer the matter to the Senate, where a two-thirds vote would be needed for removal from office.

Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo., who founded the 6th District club, said:

"If I were a betting man I would bet 60 to 40 that the President would not be in office by the end of the year."

O'Neill declined to predict whether the majority report of the 38-member committee would support impeachment. "Right now there are half a dozen votes either way with the rest undecided," he said.

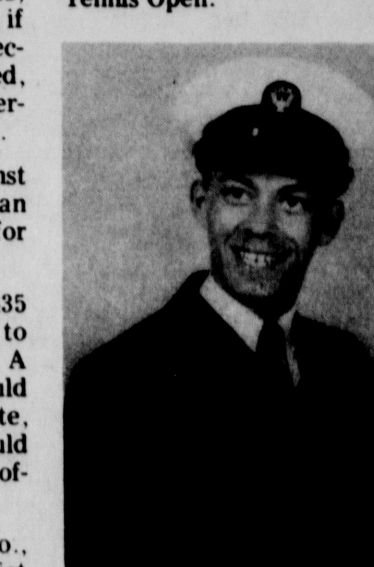

The Judiciary Committee, chaired by Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., began its investigation last October. O'Neill expects it to start questioning witnesses in May.

"I would expect that to take a month or six weeks and I think we can expect a report from the committee in the first or second week of June," he said.

How May We Serve You?

YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR FREE CAR ENERGY CLINIC

If you're like most people these days, you're quite concerned about the kind of gas mileage you're getting from your car. You want it to perform at its economical best. And so do we. That's why we had our service technicians develop an 8-point Car Energy Clinic for your car. It includes engine diagnosis, carburetor inspection, drive belt tension check, visual wheel alignment check, visual tire balance check, tire pressure check, air filter inspection, and a check for fuel, oil and coolant visual leaks. In all, it's a pretty thorough check-up. And the nice thing is that we'll do it at absolutely no charge to you. If corrective services are needed, we'll give you an accurate estimate on how much they will cost. There won't be any pressure on you to have the services performed at our service department.

These days, we think everybody should try to conserve fuel. We're trying to do our share by offering this Free Car Energy Clinic at our service department. Come in now.

Be sensible about saving fuel. Drive Oldsmobile—the sensible car. This Free Energy Clinic will be held in our Service Department from 6 to 9 P.M. on Mon.-Tues. & Wed. evenings March 25, 26, & 27.

LENTEN GUIDEPOSTS

Helping a migrant helped her

By Diana Coe

It all began one hot June day last summer. A doctor stuck his head into the department of the Memphis charity hospital where I worked as a candy-striper and asked if anyone could speak Spanish. I meekly admitted that I did.

The doctor then grabbed my arm and led to the fifth floor where his non-English-speaking patient lay. My first glimpse of this man filled me with pity and horror: one of his legs was amputated below the knee.

I gulped hard, then introduced myself to Luis Hernandez, little knowing that the humble 34-year-old Mexican migrant would play an important role in strengthening my faith in God.

After three hours of conversation, I became deeply interested in Luis. Two weeks before, after his corn crop failed, Luis had illegally crossed the Mexican border to earn enough money to feed his wife and four young children. Unable to find a job in Texas, Luis had decided to move on to Florida where Spanish is spoken by many of the residents. By hitching rides on freight trains, he had arrived in Memphis.

It was there that the accident happened. Running alongside the moving boxcar, he had grabbed for the handhold. However, because he had not eaten in eight days and was weak, Luis fell. The train crushed his leg.

Driving home, I thought about Luis. What was his future? He earned $300 a year and lived in a one-room shack with a dirt floor and no electricity or plumbing. I knew that in Mexico there was no welfare system to take care of him.

That night I turned to God and prayed as I had never prayed before, asking Him to guide me in helping this man.

The next day I gave Luis some stationery, and he began to write to his wife about his accident. As he wrote, tears of overwhelming grief streamed down his face.

While sitting at his bedside, I suddenly knew how I could help him. I would get Luis an artificial leg!

That afternoon I went to the hospital's physical therapy department and excitedly told the therapists my idea. Giving many valid arguments, they all said it was impossible.

First, Luis would be ineligible for welfare because he was an alien, and an artificial leg would cost about $500.

DIANA

Second, I would not have enough time to order the leg because as soon as he recovered, Luis would be deported.

Third, I did not have a place where Luis could stay for two months while his stump healed. Finally, they reasoned, if I were found helping him, I would be charged with aiding a criminal.

Completely convinced that my plan was indeed impossible, I went home and cried myself to sleep. However, the next morning, instead of simply crying about the situation, I prayed. I asked God to guide me in helping Luis.

For the next month I visited Luis every day and made contacts for money. Each of the clubs and churches that I went to turned me down because they had "other charity projects." After each refusal, all the therapists, my family and even Luis told me to give up.

Then one day when I arrived at the hospital I found a minister with Luis. The minister listened intently while I told him about my idea for the artificial leg. A week later he gave us our first contribution—$100 which his church had raised.

The same week, several other churches that I had previously contacted began to contribute money. By the end of that week, I had collected $400.

Clutching this money, I went to a prosthesis shop in Memphis and told my story. The owner of the shop offered me the artificial leg for $375—a reduction of more than $100.

The day that Luis had to leave the hospital finally arrived. While checking Luis out of the hospital, a social worker informed me of a boardinghouse that cost $75 a month.

I called the landlady of this house and, knowing that God would somehow furnish the money for the rent, I asked her to hold the room for two days.

That night Luis stayed at our house. While we were eating, the president of a church youth group called to contribute exactly $75. God had provided the money for the rent!

Luis' stump healed beautifully and the big day became a reality. I will never forget that exciting moment in the doctor's office when Luis stood on his artificial leg for the first time and stared into the mirror.

Then, without uttering a word, we looked at each other and with tears rolling down our cheeks, we lowered our heads and thanked God for "the impossible." c. 1974, Guideposts

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Exercise and bust size

Dear Dr. Lamb—Here is a question of interest to many women. Health spas, exercise gyms, etc. give women exercises to build up the pectoral muscles, claiming it enlarges the breast. I have read that the pectoral muscles, for some reason, cannot be built up in women as they can in men. Is it a waste of time for women to indulge in weight lifting exercises, etc. which are increasingly popular in health spas?

I have seen women lifting as much as 60-pound bars. Is this harmful? If it is true that a woman can build muscle in this area, just how much can she expect to gain in inches? Health spas give such exaggerated figures. They also claim that these exercises will help the sagging breast. Is this true or false?

Dear Reader—Such exercises will not enlarge the breast itself. But, by building up the pectoral muscles the breasts rest upon, even a small breast can be made to look larger. It's like taking a small diamond and improving its appearance by improving its setting.

Yes, women can increase the size of their pectoral muscles. Any healthy muscle will grow in relation to the amount of physical stress or tension it is required to contract against. As you increase the load, its size grows and grows. Endurance exercises are used to improve the heart and vascular system and strength exercises are used to grow muscles.

There is nothing harmful in weight lifting, done properly, for either healthy men or women. It can even be good for one's health. Developing sufficient muscle mass also helps prevent fat deposits. Muscle tissue uses more calories at rest than a similar amount of fat tissue. Hence, it is easier to control weight if more of your body weight is muscle rather than fat.

I suspect that if you get any improvement in sagging, it will be minimal. A woman can improve her posture, and when she does this and stands up straight with her shoulders back, not slouched forward, there is often less sagging of the breastline.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Most of the time I am able to control my appetite. However, there are times when I seem to crave large amounts of food. After I overeat, I go to the bathroom where, by sticking my finger down my throat, I vomit all that I've overeaten. This has been going on over a period of two years.

Is there any chance I could hurt myself by doing this? So far I haven't noted any ill effects. Incidentally, I throw up food about four times a week. I am 49 years old.

I first read of this being done by the ancient Romans. Dear Reader—You are right, the ancient Romans did do this, and then returned to the banquet hall to eat again. It isn't what I would recommend for weight control, but I suppose everyone has his price to pay for overeating.

About the only danger is that forceful vomiting can sometimes rupture a blood vessel in the bottom of the esophagus. A fairly massive bleeding can follow. I would think this unlikely as long as you didn't wrench too violently or force yourself too much.

There are more pleasant ways to keep your caloric intake down. To learn about them you might want to write for the "Losing Weight" booklet. Send 50 cents to cover costs to "Losing Weight," in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019 (NEA).

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Can the smallest city ever sanctioned to hold a world's fair really pull it off?

This city of 200,000 is giving it the All-American Try, and things look good for Expo '74, the theme being worldwide energy and environmental conservation.

Ironically, one of the impediments to the success of the fair may be fuel and gasoline shortages, but the fair's promoters think even those dire events can be surmounted.

Peter Spurney, Expo general manager and a mechanical engineer by trade, is the man who is putting it together. His problem: how to let Americans know it is on schedule to open on May 14. The fair ends Nov. 3.

"It's a sad commentary on our nation if we can't get together for our 200th anniversary," Spurney said. "What we're trying to do here in Spokane is say, 'Look America, here we are with a world's fair.'"

"It's a celebration of how we can solve some problems, the beginning of our bicentennial era. Let's look where we've been and where we're going and start pulling on the same rope."

On stage are exhibits from Japan, Taiwan, Korea, Canada, Mexico, Australia, Iran, West Germany, Montana, Idaho and the Canadian provinces of British Columbia and Alberta.

When the 180-day stand is over, Spokane will have given itself a major slum clearance project as a 100th birthday present. Most pavilions are going up in a decayed section of the city.

Mayor David Rogers is ecstatic. "So many things that are happening now either would never have happened or would not have happened to the degree they are now being developed without Expo."

"Expo gave us a certain degree of political clout and influence. Without Expo we could not have opened up our river. We will have about the greatest city center a person could dream of. Our central business district and city heart is being saved from decay."

"If Expo had failed," contends Spurney, "Spokane would have failed."

"Expo is not going to be known for the ice cream cone, or Little Egypt who danced at Chicago, or the Belgian waffle that made a hit at New York," Spurney says. "It's something more significant."

At least that's the hope. Most of the nations and companies are now completing their exhibits together.

The Soviet Union pledges that its 52,000 square-foot pavilion will include three cinema halls, art exhibits, and a program on the environment presented in layman's language, presumably English.

"We will show everything — our industries, our countryside, even our environmental problems," a Soviet spokesman said.

The Australians say, "Our exhibit will be in keeping with the environmental theme. Tentative plans call for an exhibit of Australia's unique flora and how it is handling its environmental problems."

General Motors, with 20,000 square feet and 40 displays, will include a mass transit people-mover, animated exhibits on emission controls, ecogy and alternate power sources.

Everyone, of course, will blow his own horn. That's the reason for a world's fair, or always has been.

The fair ran into some trouble last summer. Foreign exhibit commitments slowed, and cash flow became critical. The federal government began re-evaluating its participation, including its $11.5 million pavilion as the fair's initial leadership faltered.

It was rescued, however, and Spurney was one of the rescuers, as was Tommy Walker, the Disneyland consultant specializing in extravaganzas.

Spurney estimates that gasoline rationing to a 15-gallon-a-week level would cost the fair $300,000 a week, mostly in attendance lost from distant points. But this will be made up partly by regional residents who will have to forego longer vacation trips. Spurney also plans to beef up mass transit if necessary.

Far from dying, Expo 74 is stubbornly succeeding. Its organizers think the fair and the city have something to offer the nation and the world. If nothing else it has rekindled the spirit of Spokane.

New television series for children

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a new science series on TV that might be just the ticket for you if you're the sort of adult who feels uneasy when tots ask things like, "Who invented dirt?"

Although the "Nova" series on public TV doesn't come across with that answer, it did make a valiant effort Sunday night to explain the origins of life in a one-hour segment called "The Search for Life."

Granted, it sort of lost me amid chats on nucleic acids, "primordial soup" and "proteinoids." But at least it wasn't one of those "popular" science shows rampant in childlike generalities.

The 13-part Sunday series, which premiered March 3, isn't casual viewing. Billed as "scientific adventures for curious grownups," it demands the same intense concentration a particularly tough crossword puzzle requires.

"We don't think the series is going over anybody's head, but it does respect the viewer's intelligence," says Michael Rice, a program executive at Boston's WGBH, which produces "Nova."

The series, financed by $1.1 million in private and federal grants, covers an incredible range of topics — from nuclear fusion to a delightful study, coming up April 21, of how birds navigate.

One show, "Strange Sleep," features medical theatrics. It's a dramatization of how 19th century doctors and scientists discovered anesthesia, and their roles are portrayed by real physicians from Massachusetts General Hospital and the Harvard Medical School.

Rice says "Nova" was inspired by the British Broadcasting Corporation's successful "Horizons" science series and in fact includes seven "Horizon" programs in the current batch.

Rice said there'll be from 20 to 26 new "Nova" segments on the air next season, depending on finances.
